

U.S. Colleges and Universities Join Forces to Address High-Risk Drinking

FSU Part of National Learning Collaborative Effort

Colleges and universities from across the country, including FSU, are joining forces to address high-risk drinking on American campuses. This unprecedented group initiative – the Learning Collaborative on High-Risk Drinking – will use comprehensive evaluation and measurement techniques to identify and implement the most effective ways to confront this persistent problem and lessen the harm it causes.

“I am so pleased that Frostburg State University has been invited to join the Dartmouth Learning Collaborative so we can share the successful strategies we have implemented at Frostburg – strategies that have led to a 27 percent reduction in high-risk drinking since 1997,” said President Jonathan Gibraltar. “With the collaborative knowledge generated during this project, it is my hope that strategies will be implemented that will cause colleges and universities to focus upon the importance of high-risk drinking so they can share in and perhaps even exceed our success.”

In addition to FSU, 13 other institutions have joined the Collaborative to date: Boston University, Cornell University, Dartmouth College, Duke University, Northwestern University, Ohio University, Princeton University, Purdue University, Sewanee: The University of the South, Stanford University, Stony Brook University, University of Wyoming and Wesleyan University. The Collaborative will accept additional schools through May 20.

“Binge drinking is a serious public health challenge, leading to injury and in some cases, death, for hundreds of thousands of college students each year,” said U.S Health and Human Services Secretary Kathleen Sebelius. “HHS agencies have tackled this issue over the years, strengthening the evidence base and identifying interventions that work to reduce binge drinking. The Learning Collaborative on High-Risk Drinking is a promising initiative that will implement evidence-based practices at college campuses around the nation.”

The Learning Collaborative methodology was developed by the Institute for Healthcare Improvement in Cambridge, Mass., and is aimed at spreading and adapting knowledge to different settings to address a given problem or health concern. This model has already been used successfully hundreds of times in medicine and public health. Using this system, participants are able to implement changes quickly and determine which methods are most effective in their institutions. These experiences then inform the process and progress of the group as a whole.

A centerpiece of the methodology is its focus on measurement. Various measures will be developed to track the progress of the effort, in consultation with experts from across the country. Data will be shared and compared among participant institutions with the goal of lowering the rate of binge drinking and reducing the incidence of the harm associated with this behavior.

Close to 2,000 college students in the U.S. die each year from alcohol-related injuries, including motor vehicle accidents, and an estimated 600,000 students are injured while under the influence, according to research from the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism. In addition, research has consistently shown that binge drinking often leads to sexual abuse and unsafe sex as well as academic problems.

Faculty Achievement Award Winners to Be Honored at Convocation

The recipients of the 2011 Faculty Achievement Awards, with top graduating students from every degree program, will be honored at the University Honors Convocation on Friday, May 20, at 7:30 p.m. in PAC Pealer Recital Hall. All members of the University community are invited to attend the Convocation and the reception that follows.

This year’s Faculty Achievement Award recipients are Dr. William L. Anderson, Department of Economics, for Academic Accomplishment; Dr. Scott P. Johnson, Department of Political Science, for Academic Accomplishment; and Dr. Yan Bao, Department of Accounting, for University and Community Service. The awards are made possible through generous gifts to the FSU Foundation, Inc.

In addition to the faculty awards, one graduating student per degree program will be honored for academic excellence and leadership. Faculty members in each program have selected 12 graduate students and 36 undergraduate students to be recognized. Also commended will be 30 undergraduate students receiving honors in general education, based on completion of all requirements of the University Honors Program.

🎵 Music

Note: Unless otherwise noted, recitals and concerts will take place in PAC Pealer Recital Hall and are free and open to the public. For info, contact the Dept. of Music at x4109.

Clarinet Studio Recital

The FSU Clarinet Studio will present a recital on Monday, May 9, at 8 p.m.

The ensemble will perform works by American composer Jean Becker, German composers Robert Schumann and Georg Philipp Telemann, French composers Paul Jeanjean and Olivier Messiaen and Finnish composer Bernhard Crusell.

The clarinetists, performing under the direction of Dr. Mark Gallagher, are Ariana Brown, Jasmine Chung, Mallory Cook, Sarah Galvin, Amanda Gold and Emily Hornbaker.

Presentations

What’s Going on at Compton?

Have you ever wondered what goes on behind closed doors in Compton Science Center? Then stop by the Third Annual Biology Department Showcase and Symposium on Monday, May 9, in the third floor atrium of Compton between 4:30 and 6:30 p.m.

Meet some of the faculty and undergraduate and graduate student researchers in the Department of Biology and learn about exciting research in the lab and in the field.

For info, contact Dr. Kristen A. Lennon at x4697 or kalennon@frostburg.edu.

ACES Annual Research Symposium

The Appalachian Center for Ethnobotanical Studies will present its Annual Research Symposium on Friday, June 24, from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at the Mount Washington Conference Center in Baltimore. This year’s event, co-sponsored by Johns Hopkins Center for a Livable Future, will provide an opportunity to engage with experts in the field and learn more about genomics in medicinal plant research, food production systems and Appalachian networks for sustainability. Invited speakers include Dennis Stevenson of the New York Botanical Gardens; Sally Goerner, author of “The New Science of Sustainability”; and Joe Chappell from the University of Kentucky. Dr. James Duke, author of the “Green Pharmacy,” will perform Appalachian music in celebration of plants.

The meeting is free and open to the public but advance registration is required. Electronic registration can be found at www.frostburg.edu/aces/community-news-events/symposium-registration/, or contact ACES Outreach Coordinator Mimi Hernandez at mhernandez@frostburg.edu or x3136.

Students are encouraged to submit poster abstracts at <http://mirror.frostburg.edu/aces/community-news-events/abstract-upload/>. The deadline to submit abstracts and to be included in the printed abstract book is June 3. Receipt of abstracts will be confirmed with an immediate e-mail after Internet submission. Posters should measure 48 inches (width) by 36 inches (height). Poster setup will be at noon.

ACES is a partnership of Frostburg State University, West Virginia University, the University of Maryland and the Tai Sophia Institute. Its mission is to study native plants with medicinal or other useful properties, promote the conservation of these plants and Appalachian ecosystems as a whole, preserve Appalachian culture as it relates to wild plant harvesting and traditional use and work with local businesses to bring economic benefits to the region from managed development of botanical resources. For info about ACES, go to www.frostburg.edu/aces.

The Johns Hopkins Center for a Livable Future promotes research and develops and communicates information about the complex interrelationships among diet, food production, environment and human health. The center advances an ecological perspective in reducing threats to the health of the public and promotes policies that protect health, the global environment and the ability to sustain life for future generations. For info, about the center, go to www.jhsph.edu/clf.

AL Seminar Series

Dr. Hermann Engelhardt, California Institute of Technology, will present “ICE: From Molecules to Fast-Moving Antarctic Ice Streams With Implications to Global Change” Thursday, May 12, at 3:30 p.m. in AL Room 109.

For info, go to www.umces.edu/al/seminar/schedule.

Staking Our Claim Arts Lover Creates New FSU Scholarship

The performing arts have always made Sandi Saville’s heart race. The love affair began when Saville, a Cumberland native and graduate of Fort Hill High School, joined the school’s Ushers Committee, which gave her an opportunity to meet the visiting artists who performed there.

“The Vienna Boys Choir performed each year and some of the members stayed at our house,” Saville said. “From then on I was smitten with live performance.”

Her passion for the arts continued into college.

“I roomed with a ballet dancer at WVU who dragged me to Pittsburgh to wait in line at four in the morning to get tickets for Margot Fontaine and Rudolph Nureyev – I was totally hooked,” she said.

Saville eventually moved to Alaska, where she practiced law for 28 years and continued her arts advocacy by serving on the State Council for the Arts, including a few years as chair. Her creativity also led her to New York, where she studied at the International Center for Photography.

Today, Saville is interested in supporting the arts through higher education – both as an instructor and as a dedicated and generous advocate. She teaches “Legal Issues in the Arts” in FSU’s Department of Music and serves on the Board of Directors for the FSU Foundation, Inc. Saville is also a leadership donor to FSU’s Annual Fund and supporter of other campus initiatives, including the Friends of Music and the Center for Creative Writing.

Saville recently recognized an opportunity to combine her experience and knowledge of the arts and arts advocacy with her leadership in FSU’s fundraising efforts by creating the Sandra K. Saville Presidential Merit Scholarship for the Arts with a $25,000 commitment, part of the $34,000 she has generously given to Staking Our Claim: The Campaign for Frostburg. The Sandra K. Saville Presidential Merit Scholarship for the Arts supports FSU students majoring in the performing or visual arts who have an overall grade point average of at least 3.5. It is the first scholarship created as part of the Presidential Merit Scholarships program, a fundraising effort led by President Jonathan Gibraltar and the FSU Foundation to secure $2.5 million in merit-based scholarships for high-academic achievers over the next five years.

“I’m pleased Sandi took the initiative to create this scholarship because it upholds FSU’s legacy of providing learning opportunities for the most deserving students. They will help the University raise the bar on its academic standards and reach new levels of excellence,” Gibraltar said. “The Presidential Merit Scholarships will also help FSU’s best and brightest students go on to successful careers and continue adding to FSU’s strong foundation for the future.”

The FSU Foundation is nearing the end of a $15 million comprehensive campaign, Staking Our Claim: The Campaign for Frostburg, to raise badly needed funding for higher education in Western Maryland. Gifts support student enrichment, academic enrichment and regional and cultural enrichment. For info about supporting these scholarships, visit www.frostburg.edu/admin/foundation or call x4161.

Points of Pride Stars of Excellence

On April 27, FSU hosted its annual Stars of Excellence Greek Awards Ceremony. The Theta Lambda Chapter was awarded with Outstanding Risk Management, Outstanding Philanthropy and Outstanding Chapter Excellence.

Individual awards went to Kandice Lenhart (Greek Council president and chapter vice president of programming) who won Honorary Greek Member of the Year, April Baer (membership advisor and founding member) who won Advisor of the Year and Jennifer Gover (College Panhellenic vice president, chapter secretary and founding member) who won the Hera Award for Greek Woman of the Year!

Does Your Dept. Have a Facebook Page?

Have you been asked to develop a Facebook page or some other social media presence for your department or program? If so, take advantage of resources available through FSU's eFrostburg Community. This site includes a downloadable marketing plan with strategies for how to communicate through social media, a social media registry and other useful information.

Also, check out the eFrostburg Community Facebook page, which is used to regularly share ideas and articles about social media and higher education, and highlight how FSU is using social media to get the word out about its programs, initiatives, activities and events.

These resources were developed by FSU's Social Media Group, a group of faculty and staff who are considering how social media can be integrated into FSU's overall educational experience and marketing presence.

Study Abroad

The Center for International Education offers ways for FSU students to see the world. In some cases, students can pay FSU tuition, room and board and study abroad for a semester or a year. FSU also offers summer study abroad programs. Financial aid, student loans and scholarships are available.

Limerick, Ireland (Fall 2011)

Students can study for a semester at Mary Immaculate College and pay FSU tuition. Credits will transfer back to FSU. For info, go to www.mic.ul.ie/.

Changsha, China (Fall 2011)

Through the China Exchange Program, FSU students can spend a semester at Hunan Normal University in Changsha, Hunan Province, P.R. China (www.hunnu.edu.cn/english/).

Students pay FSU tuition and fees (based on residency status) through their student e-bill account and pay room and board costs to HNU.

Call for Submissions

Museums on Main Street, a division of the Smithsonian, with the Maryland Humanities Council, will continue the acclaimed exhibit, “Between Fences,” at Spruce Forest Artisan Village through June 26. A partner in this endeavor, the Appalachian Independent (www.appindie.org) seeks essay submissions, creative writing, poetry or short audio/digital explorations (3,000 words or less) complementing the exhibit’s themes: boundaries, place and space.

“Between Fences” strives to engage audiences, create conversations and inspire community members to come together across borders and backyard fences to share their unique “fence stories.” Submissions will be featured in the Appalachian Independent during the exhibit’s stay in Mountain Maryland and may be incorporated into an on-site satellite display.

For info on the exhibition, go to www.museumonmainstreet.org/exhibs_fences/fences.htm. Submissions should be sent to rogerstthomas@appindie.org.
