Nurturing the next generation of educators and innovators

We are celebrating at Frostburg State University as we near an important milestone. June 30 is the end of Staking Our Claim: The Campaign for Frostburg, but we are happy to say that in January, nearly six months early, we reached our $15 million fundraising goal (see page one of the Honor Roll). We are, however, more determined to work diligently to secure additional gifts in support of the many underfunded initiatives of our campaign. There is much work to be done.

Like the miners who founded this fine institution, many generous alumni, foundations and friends of the University have stepped up and “staked their claim” in FSU’s future. In particular, those alumni who have proclaimed their love for FSU through their gifts to this campaign are making sure that current and future generations of students have the same opportunities that they had in their time at Frostburg. I can’t begin to tell you how many of our students have shared that if not for the support of a certain scholarship, they would not be able to attend college. In the back pages of this issue of Profile, you will find a comprehensive listing of those who have supported this campaign. My heartfelt thanks to all of you: You understand the value of FSU and the need that many of our students have.

There will also be another milestone for Frostburg State University this year. As part of our strategic enrollment planning efforts, I have decided that we will raise the minimum SAT score required for admission to FSU. This is the first phase of a multi-year plan to raise our standards, raise our reputation and to find our proper place within the marketplace of American higher education institutions. These measures are supported by the responses of our faculty, staff and students in our Middle States Commission on Higher Education Periodic Review Survey, which identified making greater efforts to recruit more high academic achievers as the highest priority for the institution.

I believe that as this process moves ahead, we will be a much better institution. Our students are extraordinary and want to learn with other students who challenge them. Our faculty likewise want to educate better-prepared students. Frostburg State University will seek to raise its national reputation in the coming years. It is time for FSU to shed undeserved images of a party school that is just second best. Neither description is true, evident in our talented and successful alumni and the many, many students for whom Frostburg is their first choice among many schools of distinction.

I unfortunately have to end on a somber note. Just as this past semester was coming to a close, we sadly lost two of our students in a fire in their apartment on Main Street, Frostburg. Alyssa Salazar, an education major, and Evan Kullberg, a liberal studies major who was focusing on business, were loved and admired by their friends and faculty members and are sorely missed. (More information on this incident is available at tinyurl.com/MainStFire.)

It is painful to lose two young people who had such enormous potential, but it has been encouraging to see the students come together to comfort one another in their grief. In the days following the tragedy, I heard the phrase, “We’re a family here at Frostburg,” more than once, a truth that alumni know well. And while this family is hurting, we will also draw strength from one another as we move forward.

Thank you for caring about FSU. I hope you enjoy the spring 2011 edition of Profile.

Sincerely,

Online MBA Rated a “Best Buy” by GetEducated.com

GetEducated.com, a consumer watchdog group that reviews and ranks online academic programs for cost, quality and credibility, has ranked FSU among its best values in AACSB-accredited online master of business administration degrees. FSU's online MBA ranks ninth on this national list.

The online business degree rankings are based on a national survey of 69 AACSB-accredited business schools that offer master of business administration degrees using distance-learning technology.

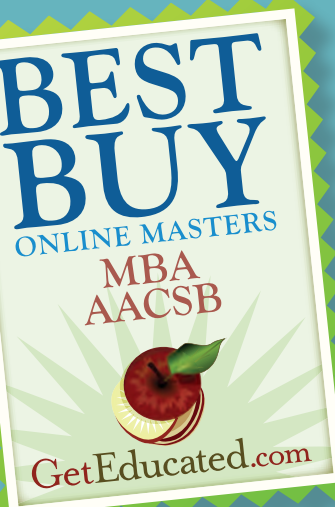

“This is the result of a truly collaborative effort between our MBA coordinator, the director of Graduate Services and the faculty of the College of Business who worked together for over two years in order to launch such a high-quality online program,” said Dr. Ahmad Tootoonchi, dean of the FSU College of Business.

Maryland residents will pay just under $12,000 for FSU's distance MBA. Online students outside Maryland will pay more at about $14,000. According to GetEducated.com, by comparison, the average cost for an online MBA with AACSB accreditation is $32,926.

“Cost is the No. 1 factor that keeps working Americans from enrolling in higher education,” said Vicky Phillips, GetEducated.com's founder. “FSU offers online learners in Maryland a chance at a high-quality graduate business degree through distance learning at about one-third the cost of the national average. That's an amazing value.”

“In today's highly complex global environment, earning a graduate degree that is based entirely on face-to-face class participation is almost impossible for many citizens of the world,” Tootoonchi said. “Our faculty developed a plan that provides students, regardless of their location, the opportunity to obtain a master of business administration degree through online learning without compromising our continuous commitment to high-quality education.” FSU's MBA was offered fully online for the first time starting in fall 2010. Courses are still available in face-to-face format as well.

College of Business Granted Continuing AACSB Accreditation

FSU's College of Business has successfully completed the extensive evaluation required to maintain its accreditation from AACSB International (the Association to Advance Collegiate Schools of Business). FSU earned initial accreditation five years ago.

“We earned this through teamwork, and I am truly proud to be a member of this outstanding team of faculty and staff,” said Dr. Ahmad Tootoonchi, dean of the College of Business. “As difficult as it was to earn the initial accreditation, it has been equally challenging to maintain our standing, but we were determined to do the work necessary to sustain this highly regarded external validation of the quality of our programs.”

The University received a number of commendations with its notification. In particular, Tootoonchi was recognized for encouraging “inclusion, mutual respect, a positive and open culture and a commitment to the continuous quality standards of AACSB.” The peer review team that examined FSU's program reported that it found the same culture of openness and transparency among the members of the College of Business Advisory Board, faculty teams and student groups as well.

AACSB also singled out the opportunities for field experience, internships or other substantial experiential learning opportunities provided to students, as evidenced by the 80 percent participation rate among FSU College of Business students in these real-world experiences. Assurance of Learning review groups, made up of faculty and students, and the mechanisms within professional development courses to allow involvement from the Advisory Board and other external constituents were identified as strengths of FSU's program.

“I am very proud of our College of Business for achieving successful reaffirmation of AACSB accreditation,” said President Gibraltar. “It is a tribute to the outstanding leadership demonstrated by Dr. Tootoonchi and Dr. (Sudhir) Singh (associate dean of the College of Business), and to the outstanding quality of our faculty that led to such high praise from the team that evaluated the College. Students can be confident that they are receiving an education from one of the very best business schools in the state of Maryland.”

Gibraltar Appointed to ACUPCC's Steering Committee

Building on FSU's commitment to the American College & University President's Climate Commitment, President Gibraltar was recently appointed to the ACUPCC's 2011-2012 Steering Committee.

“I'm honored to continue working closely with the ACUPCC in emphasizing higher education's role in addressing climate change,” said Gibraltar, who in past years has served as a member of the organization's Leadership Circle. “Global warming is a defining challenge of our time, and I believe that higher education can lead the way in creating the needed educational, research and operational changes to fight it.”

The ACUPCC Steering Committee is comprised of more than 20 university and college presidents. As part of his membership, Gibraltar is responsible for assuring the integrity, credibility and success of the ACUPCC and creating policy and direction for the organization.

As a collective effort of more than 680 institutions, representing more than 5.7 million students – about one-third of the nation's college students – the ACUPCC serves as a vehicle for showcasing the leadership of the higher education sector.

“Colleges and universities must lead the effort to reverse global warming for the health and well-being of current and future generations,” said Michael Crow, president of Arizona State University and co-chair of the ACUPCC Steering Committee. “On behalf of all the signatories, I welcome Dr. Gibraltar to the Steering Committee; we are honored and pleased to have him join us.”

Ian Spears in the Czech Republic

Student Leader Gains World View in Prague

By Beth Petrovich '11

Student Government President Ian Spears knows how to handle what comes to him. He is a double major, involved in numerous groups, the president of the Student Government Association and has spoken as a representative of the student body in media interviews. But a phone call from Dr. Tom Bowling, vice president for Student and Educational Services, almost caused him to break his stride.

“I was sitting in the [SGA] office and Dr. Bowling called me. He asked me if I wanted to go to Prague, and I said, ‘Prague as in the Czech Republic?’” said Spears.

Because of his position as president of the SGA, Spears had the opportunity to attend the 20th annual International Youth Leadership Conference there in July 2010. The IYLC is an annual, week-long conference hosted bi-annually in Prague. The conference welcomes students from colleges all over the globe for the intensive event.

And IYLC has its roots in a past FSU student leader, William Webster '97, founder of the conference and executive director of Civic Concepts International, an organization that promotes global citizenship. Spears and Webster had the opportunity to meet in Prague.

“Each day is different,” said Spears. The topics ranged from international security and leadership to criminal justice and European government. During the European government day, the attendees simulated a session of Parliament. The conference has a world focus, allowing the selected students from 40 countries to explore issues from a variety of perspectives and backgrounds.

Thanks to this experience, Spears now knows at least one person from all but one of the continents. He keeps in contact with the people he met in Prague through Facebook, and they talk occasionally to catch up. Spears not only met other students, he met the Israeli, Palestinian and British ambassadors and the deputy ambassador to Slovenia.

Spears has been a member of the SGA since the spring 2008 semester.

“I was always the person sitting back and saying what I would do if I were president,” Spears said. “Then when it came to running, I decided it was time to make things happen instead of just saying what I'd do.”

Along with being the SGA president, Spears is a member of the President's Leadership Circle, the Student Conduct Panel and the Black Student Alliance. Spears is double-majoring in political science and law and society, with a concentration in criminal justice; he plans to graduate in spring 2011.

Hernandez Elected to the Council of American Herbalists Guild

Mimi Hernandez, coordinator of the Appalachian Center for Ethnobotanical Studies at FSU, was recently elected to the council of the American Herbalists Guild, a national organization representing the goals of herbalists specializing in the medicinal use of plants.

Since arriving at FSU in January 2010, Hernandez has developed the Mountain Herbalist Series. She established the first certification course in community herbalism in the Cumberland area, and introduced Appalachian Mountain Roots in events around the country. Hernandez collaborates with the FSU College of Business to enhance economic development for area growers, harvesters and value-added product manufacturers in the region. The collaboration resulted in an award from the Federal Economic Development Administration University Center Partnership Program to catalog the natural products industry of Western Maryland.

AHG professional membership currently serves as the most recognizable standard of competency in botanical medicine in the U.S. Hernandez, a clinically trained herbalist, has been a professional member of AHG since 2008.

FSU Joins American Council on Renewable Energy

To further the study and implementation of renewable energy and create a more sustainable campus, Frostburg State University has joined the American Council on Renewable Energy as an institutional member of its Higher Education Committee. ACORE is an organization of over 600 member companies and institutions that are dedicated to moving renewable energy into the mainstream of the U.S. economy.

“As part of ACORE's Higher Education Committee, Frostburg State has an opportunity to share knowledge and collaborate with other institutions on increasing the use of renewable energy on college campuses, developing curricula and resources and growing funding for higher education-based research and development of renewable energy,” said President Gibraltar, who registered the University for the membership. “This supports our ongoing efforts to position ourselves as an educational resource for renewable energy and to reduce our carbon footprint. We are taking a role in the national conversation about renewable energy and sustainability.”

Through its ACORE membership, FSU will also have access to an active network of renewable energy leaders through discounted networking events, teleconferences, webinars and publications. The organization will also help FSU stay informed of the latest developments, trends and opportunities in renewable energy.

Accolades Roll in for FSU Wildlife Society and Its Adviser

It's been a good year for the FSU Student Chapter of the Wildlife Society. Last spring, the chapter hosted the largest-ever Southeastern Wildlife Society Conclave on campus; its adviser, Dr. Frank Ammer, was named national Student Chapter Adviser of the Year; and the chapter itself was named the Southeastern Section Student Chapter of the Year.

The more than 50 students involved in the chapter hosted the 2010 Southeastern Conclave on campus over spring break, welcoming 361 students from 22 universities in the southeastern U.S. The FSU members handled all aspects of the event, including fundraising, preparing competitions and helping attendees find their way around. It was one of the largest competitive academic events ever held at FSU.

That success was followed up with the honor for Ammer, a faculty member in the Department of Biology. He was honored at the 73rd Annual Awards Ceremony in Snowbird, Utah, in October, in recognition of his "admirable work concerning wildlife, students and the chapter."

He was nominated by the members of the FSU chapter, which has grown significantly from 10 students in 2005. "If he isn't running and working a volunteer Arboretum clean-up with students, or taking students to present research posters at the state chapter meetings, then he's writing letters of recommendation or helping students find jobs," said Jessica Brandt, a member of FSU-TWS.

Ammer advises graduate and undergraduate students alike, often encouraging undergraduates to participate in graduate students' projects, the nomination letter says. He advertises the student presentations to give the students a formal experience.

The final cap on a great year came when the entire chapter was honored as the Southeastern Section Student Chapter of the Year at the 64th Annual Southeastern Association of Fish and Wildlife Agencies Conference in Biloxi, Miss. The Southeastern Section of the Wildlife Society includes 13 states, including the District of Columbia, the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico. The honor came with a $1,000 award for chapter activities.

"I am extremely proud of the hard work and dedication that these young professionals have displayed this year," Ammer said. "I am honored to serve as their adviser."

The students involved in the chapter participate in the Conservation Leaders for Tomorrow program, the Wildlife Habitat Council and the Southeastern and Northeastern Conclaves. They encourage community participation in the chapter through Focus the Future and Focus Frostburg.

Md. Campus Compact Honors Mandicott With Institutional Leadership Award

The Maryland Campus Compact, an association of the state's colleges and universities dedicated to addressing community issues, honored FSU's Bill Mandicott with its first-ever Institutional Leadership Award.

Mandicott, assistant vice president for Student and Community Involvement, was chosen because of his vision for service on the Frostburg campus and his contribution to the overall success of campus-community collaboration and service-learning.

"No one has done more to blur the boundaries between the campus and the community than Bill Mandicott," said Dr. Tom Bowling, vice president for Student and Educational Services. "This award is a very appropriate way to recognize how his leadership has transformed community engagement at FSU since his arrival in 1989."

In 1994, when Frostburg was among the first universities to receive an AmeriCorps grant, Mandicott contacted representatives from local service agencies to determine the needs of the community. Because of this collaboration, Mandicott helped facilitate a strong foundation for service and service-learning. In 2000, the Corporation for National Service recognized FSU's service-learning programs with its first-ever Higher Education Award for Leadership in National Service in 2000.

Part of Mandicott's legacy is FSU's Office of Leadership and Civic Engagement. Among its initiatives are a learning community with a focus on service-learning whose students live together while they provide service to the local area and an alternative-break program in which students provide service in a variety of locations during winter and spring breaks. Since its inception, well over $10 million in external grants has been secured to support this office's initiatives.

Mandicott created the Cultural Events Series and collaborated with faculty colleagues to develop a leadership minor and build a solid core of courses well-integrated with service-learning. Among his many involvements on campus and in the community, he is chair of the Maryland State Arts Council, adviser to the FSU Student Government Association and serves on the boards of the Western Maryland Food Bank and the Allegany County Animal Shelter.

Ketterman Selected for 2010 VIP List

Assistant Vice President for Student Services and Dean of Students Dr. Jesse Ketterman M'98/M'01 was named to The Daily Record's 2010 VIP List, for Very Important Professionals who are successful by age 40.

Ketterman was selected because of his outstanding professional accomplishment, civic involvement and impact of achievement before age 40. He was honored at an award ceremony held at the Baltimore Museum of Art and profiled in a special magazine in the Sept. 24 issue of The Daily Record, a Maryland publication that focuses on business and legal news.

"Frostburg State University, our students and the surrounding community have all benefitted enormously from Dr. Ketterman's professionalism, work ethic and ability to form strategic partnerships," said Dr. Tom Bowling, FSU vice president for Student and Educational Services. "This award is a well-deserved recognition of the efforts he has made throughout his career at FSU."

Ketterman recently received a national award as Mid-Level Student Affairs Professional of the Year by NASPA, Student Affairs Administrators in Higher Education.

FSU Honors Three With Staff Awards for Excellence

FSU honored three outstanding employees, Ann Townsell '87, Karen Frink and Dean Bolden during Fall Convocation. The annual Staff Awards for Excellence recognize outstanding service to the institution, and the recipients are nominated and chosen by their colleagues.

Ann Townsell was honored in the Exempt (salaried) employee category. Employed by FSU for the past 14 years, Townsell is currently assistant director of Publications. Examples of her professional excellence are on view in numerous University fliers, posters advertisements and graduate recruitment materials. In line with FSU's mission to provide "real-world situations," Townsell has tutored countless interns in graphic design and has been an active member of the Learning Green, Living Green Committee since its inception. She has also provided years of dedication and service to the local art community, which has grown because of her involvement; she was recently recognized by the Allegany Arts Council with a Lifetime Membership Award.

Karen Frink, administrative assistant in the Department of Recreation and Parks Management, was honored in the category of Nonexempt employee. Frink began her employment at FSU five years ago. Not only has she performed her normal job duties and responsibilities with dedication and professionalism, her contribution to the department's students has been exemplary. When the Recreation Society needed an advisor, she volunteered. When an international student trip needed coordination, she stepped in. In fact, Frink's contribution to the department was recognized in the Report to the Council on Accreditation. Frink also volunteers her time serving in various capacities for Frankfort High School.

Dean Bolden, an FSU employee for 11 years, was recognized under the Nonexempt employee/facilities/maintenance category. Examples of his work as a carpenter can be found throughout the campus. Whether it's installing acoustical ceiling grids or building scaffolding, Bolden can be found hard at work. His supervisors and fellow employees know that he takes pride in his work and always pays attention to detail. In addition to his work duties, Bolden serves on the

BURG Peer Education Network Honored as National Outstanding Affiliate

The BURG Peer Education Network was honored as National Outstanding Affiliate at the 35th Annual National BACCHUS General Assembly in Indianapolis, Ind., in early November.

Individual FSU students were also honored during the conference, including Mark Freeman and Katie Deal, who fulfilled their roles as BACCHUS national and regional leaders, and Sheldon Jackson, who was elected as the new member of the Student Advisory Committee from BACCHUS Region 12. Jackson is a second-year peer educator at FSU, and is the seventh FSU student to hold this regional leadership position. Frostburg has consecutively held the position for five years.

"I am privileged to work with such courageous, talented and compassionate young people. These student leaders are a valuable asset to our University," said BURG adviser Don Swogger. "I am proud to serve as their advisor and appreciate their commitment to help challenge minds, heal hearts and save lives."

University's Health and Safety Committee. He genuinely cares about the safety and well-being of his co-workers, students and the campus community. Bolden's service to the community includes 26 years of service to the Eastern Garrett County Volunteer Fire and Rescue Department.

Ethnobotany Student Wins Award for Analysis of Dulcimer Makers

Mitra Karimian, an undergraduate ethnobotany student at FSU, won an honorable mention for the Julia F. Morton Award for her poster "Analysis of Dulcimer Makers in Appalachia" at the International Society for Economic Botany Meeting in Xalapa, Mexico.

Karimian began the project on the dulcimer, a folk instrument prevalent in Southern Appalachia, as part of the Ethnographic Field Techniques course at FSU. She conducted ethnographic research on dulcimer makers throughout the region, documenting preferences for specific tree species based on tonal quality, as well as other factors such as convenience, price and availability. She also acquired background information about dulcimer makers, including how they acquired and developed their skills, and examined lineages of dulcimer making and the relationships between makers and musicians. The goal of the research was to preserve cultural knowledge around this folk craft, document tree species vital for cultural traditions and promote sustainability in resource use.

Sunshine Brosi, Thomas Berry, Nathan Beeman, Steven Darrow, Elizabeth Deasy, Lauren Fetzer, Christopher Massimino and Carson Sommerlatt also contributed to the project.

FROSTBURG LOVE STORIES

In the last Profile, we invited alumni to share how they met their matches while at Frostburg. Here are some excerpts:

Weenie Roast Ignites Romance

Donald H. Burkett and Helen Robbie Wilson Burkett '54
Charleston, S.C.

I lived with my family in Frostburg. The college offered a four-year, tuition-free education if one pledged to teach in the state for three years after graduation. Such a deal!

Early on, a freshman mixer was held on the soccer field – a weenie roast over a blazing bonfire. Attending the mixer was Don Burkett, an older guy and so good-looking, who had decided to teach at overseas military bases. ... He asked me for a date in October. We watched the Frostburg Halloween Parade – really! After the parade he introduced me to the Century Club, a dive on Mechanic Street. If you could stand cigarette smoke, the smell of beer and very loud music, it was cool!

... By January 1951, Don's grades were not good. The draft was breathing down his back, so he and three others enlisted in the Air Force. During a leave in June, Don proposed on a date at the Clary Club, where Louis Prima and Keely Smith were performing. Then he was off for a three-year tour of duty. ...

He returned during my senior year. Don and I married June 19, 1954, in Frostburg. We headed for Prince George's County, Md., where I fulfilled my teaching commitment and Don got his B.S. at the University of Maryland.

After 56 years together, three children and seven grandchildren, life is good. This September (2010), we'll attend our oldest grandson's marriage to a young lady he met while a student. May they have a life-time together as blessed as Don and I have had that began at a wiener roast at Frostburg State Teachers College in 1950.

Sparks in the Stacks

Don Kaplon '58 and Pat Allen Kaplon '58
Madison, Va.

Don and I first became aware of each other while studying in the library. We exchanged many glances, but neither of us was bold enough to approach the other. One day, I was walking to school, and Don pulled up in his car and asked me if I wanted a ride to school. ...

We often communicated by leaving notes for each other on the Old Main bulletin board. ... I wrote poetry about him and took a lot of teasing in Miss (Pauline) Hobbs' Creative Writing class. In the few classes we did manage to schedule together, we held hands under our desks while pretending to pay attention.

We planned to marry, but felt we should each teach at least one year. ... We courted long distance till the summer of 1959, when we were married. ... We had two children, Clare and Brad, and four grandchildren. In 2009, we celebrated our 50th wedding anniversary.

Don is retired from the Harford County school system. I am retired, also, but I work in adult education, still using many of the skills I learned at FSU.

We still think fondly of our days at FSU. We know many things have changed, but FSU will always be the place we fell in love, and very dear to our hearts.

Twins' Fancy Footwork Leads to Love

Don Forrester '67 and Anne Gaskill Forrester '67
Oakland, Md.

I met Don at a Freshman Week dance when his brother Ron came up and asked me to dance. As we were dancing, he asked me if my boyfriend was also up at Frostburg. I did not have a boyfriend ... and told him this. He said he assumed I had one since I was wearing a ring on my left-hand little finger. ... I assured him it was just a ring.

Immediately there was a tap on his shoulder, and his twin brother Don cut in. Not real subtle, but they must have had some kind of signal. The rest is history: Don and I started going steady three weeks later, became engaged in July 1965 and were married June 17, 1967, two weeks after our graduation. We have been married for 43 years.

FSU has always been very special to us; we started a scholarship there in 2008 in memory of our daughter, Shannon.

Chemistry in the Chemistry Lab

James Dolly '72 and Martha Rowe Dolly '74
Cumberland, Md.

In 1971, James Dolly and Martha Rowe Dolly met in a Tawes Hall chemistry lab, not because both were taking chemistry but because Martha's roommate had to stop by the lab. Martha avoided science and math, and Jim steered clear of language courses, so this chance meeting was a rather unlikely one.

After dating for two years, they married when Martha graduated. They moved to Philadelphia, where Martha completed her M.A. and Jim his degree in optometry. Since then they have lived in Jim's hometown; they celebrated their 37th wedding anniversary in 2010. Jim is an optometrist in Hancock, and Martha, who earned her Ph.D. in linguistics, has been a member of the FSU English Department since 1981.

Their Buddies Knew Best

Adam Papp '04 and Heather Douglas Papp '03/M'06
Vine Grove, Ky.

Adam Papp and Heather Douglas were both dating other people during their first year at Frostburg, but they had friends who had a better idea. These smart friends introduced the two, and by April of the next year, Heather and Adam made their relationship official. Adam proposed to Heather on Christmas Day of 2004, and the two were married on Dec. 30, 2005, in Frostburg. ... In 2008, Adam's job with Mission Foods moved the couple to Kentucky. Adam is a district manager for Mission Foods, and Heather teaches high school Spanish. They are excited to add to their family in May 2011, as they await the arrival of their first child.

Life Begins With Frostburg

Andrew Cooke '05/M'09 and Laura Matthews Cooke '05
Fort Worth, Texas

Frostburg isn't just where we met. It's where our entire life began.

I met Andrew in resident assistant training. We both knew instantly that we were supposed to be together. We spent endless hours lying in the grass under the big trees behind Old Main, talking and laughing, waiting to graduate and start our life together. Football games, hall programs, hiking, sledding and exploring Allegany County kept us busy. ...

Andrew proposed on April 30, 2005, on the Ort Library patio. It was raining and cold, but we didn't even notice. When we got married in Baltimore the next winter, Frostburg seemed like a happy memory. We visited frequently, always stopping behind Old Main for a kiss and a prayer of thanks for what we found at FSU.

Andrew's determination to complete his MBA before having children led us back to Westminster Hall and a resident director position. Not surprising, the hall where we had our first kiss was where we found out we were expecting Lucy – the weekend we moved in. How's that for planning?

... The help of the FSU faculty and staff got us through.

... By the time Molly was born, Andrew was steps away from graduation. Molly was baptized at Cook Chapel by Father Ed Hendricks. As our family and friends held and kissed her behind Old Main, FSU wrapped around us again.

After Andrew's graduation, we moved on to Texas. Andrew works in the defense industry, and I own a boutique dessert business. Our girls, 3 and 18 months, light up our lives. We'll be heading home to visit, and that means a stop behind Old Main. Just long enough to let the girls run, look out over the campus and say another little prayer of thanks for the wonderful life FSU gave us.

Halloween and Humor Connect a Couple

Sarasota, Fla.

Kevin Phillippi and Caren Hitzelberger got dressed up on Halloween night in 2003, thinking it would be just another fun night out. Caren went ... to Repub with some of her sorority sisters ... and was introduced to Kevin through a mutual friend. They both thought the other's costume was hilarious.

The following day Kevin called Caren and asked her to meet for lunch. Kevin laughed when Caren asked if he would take her to Arby's in LaVale, and Caren laughed when he actually did. They both enjoyed the other's sarcastic sense of humor.

As much as they enjoyed the nightlife in Frostburg, their favorite memory of the 'Burg was studying together in the library. They realized if they could make studying on a below-freezing night a good time, they must have found something special.

They moved to Florida where Kevin got a job as an operations manager and Caren got her master's and a job as a mental health counselor. They were married last August, and they owe it all to the 'Burg.

We have a unique tale to tell about a love story at FSU that starts in an unusual place – the FSU Swimming Pool.

The Frostburg State University Swim Team may be the best match-maker yet. From 2000 to 2005, six FSU swim team members have met on the FSU swim team, dated and become husband and wife. All six FSU alumni were on the swim team at the same time and remain – to this day – best of friends.

SCIENCE TECHNOLOGY ENGINEERING MATH

DRAWING ON FSU'S STRENGTHS TO NURTURE THE NEXT GENERATION OF STEM INNOVATORS AND EDUCATORS

NOT SINCE THE DAYS OF SPUTNIK have American leaders expressed as much concern about the need for more scientists, mathematicians and engineers. President Obama, in his State of the Union address and elsewhere, dubbed the challenges facing American innovation our “Sputnik moment,” calling for the kind of focused effort in science and math education that had occurred following the Soviet Sputnik launch in 1957. The president set a goal in September to recruit 10,000 new teachers in the fields of science, technology, engineering and mathematics (a group of often-intersecting disciplines frequently called STEM) over the next two years, and 100,000 over the next 10 years.

“Strengthening STEM education is vital to preparing our students to compete in the 21st century economy and we need to recruit and train math and science teachers to support our nation’s students,” Obama said.

Frostburg State University is meeting the “Sputnik moment” challenge in a variety of ways. In the stories that follow, learn how Frostburg students are strengthening their skills in the STEM fields through an innovative living-learning program, how an FSU student and his faculty mentor are making strides in the field of nanotechnology and how FSU is encouraging students who love science and math to consider passing on that love and excitement as teachers.

PROFESSOR AND STUDENT WORK TOGETHER TO CREATE SMALL WONDERS WITH HUGE POSSIBILITIES

By Sidni Giordano '11 and Liz Douglas Medcalf

“We all have a little mad scientist in us.” So says FSU senior Joseph Oxenham, an engineering major whose internship working alongside Dr. Kasif Teker, assistant professor of Physics and Engineering, in FSU’s Nanotechnology Lab, has put him in a position where he’s sometimes mistaken for a graduate student.

And like any good “mad scientists,” Teker and Oxenham have whipped up something amazing: They have developed a new technique for manufacturing nanowires, microscopic structures – tens of thousands of times smaller than a human hair – that have potential uses in medical applications, the next generation of computers or any number of possibilities.

Oxenham was a student in one of Teker’s classes in fall 2008. He was looking for an internship, and Teker was looking for an intern to assist him in his research. Teker extended an invitation for Oxenham to participate in his research and experience learning beyond the scope of a normal classroom.

“Initially, I didn’t know what it was,” said Oxenham of the research he was being asked to join. “The more he told me about the work, the more and more fascinated I was because it pushed me. It was beyond the scope of what I would normally be learning, and it was so far out there that it just engaged me to learn and broaden my knowledge in areas I hadn’t even considered.”

Bringing undergraduates into the research process early is part of Teker’s educational philosophy – involve students in the beginning of their college career, rather than later.

“They will be much more confident,” Teker asserted. “There are a lot of positive aspects for students. They will be ready for report writing, reading research articles, high-end research articles even.”

Other researchers have noted that confidence in Oxenham. “We have been going to WVU to use facilities with instruments that are not available at Frostburg. When people find out I’m an undergraduate, they don’t believe me,” Oxenham said.

Nanotechnology is still in the mode of discovery. FSU’s Nanotechnology Lab was established by an Appalachian Regional Commission grant of $96,000, matched by FSU, in 2008. A second ARC grant of $49,000, also matched by FSU, in 2010 enabled additional equipment to be purchased and allowed the lab’s mission to expand. The project also received funding from the FSU Foundation’s unrestricted Annual Fund.

Teker’s original goal was to develop a simple technique for making silicon carbide nanowires. Silicon carbide is a semiconductor material, like silicon, but one that can work at higher temperatures. It is used in most of the micro-electronic industry, such as in chips, cell phones and computers. “They are everywhere nowadays,” Teker said.

Silicon carbide nanowires are used for applications in nanoelectronics, field emission devices, nanocomposites, high-temperature sensor applications and more due to their excellent mechanical and electrical properties. In addition, silicon carbide nanowires can emit blue-green light, so they have great potential as light-emitting devices, Teker said.

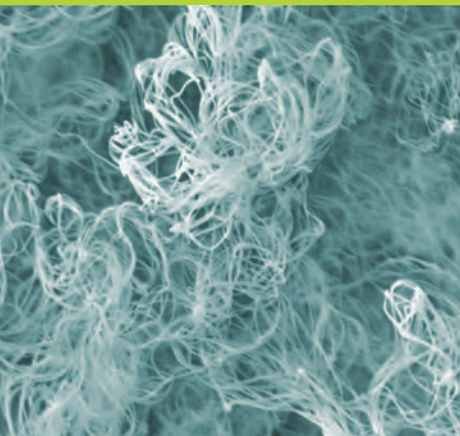

Teker developed a system that was so successful that they were able to develop the technique in summer 2009.

“I was a little surprised about how much success we have had in such a short period of time with very limited human resources,” Teker said.

“This summer (2010) we were able to produce more nano materials such as gallium nitride and aluminum nitride in our system. It is a very versatile deposition system that we can use to make these nanowires, nanomaterials,” Teker said. “Now our goal from here, with the most recent funding, is we would like to make devices for sensors, for sensing implications.”

Teker said that in addition to the implications for electricity generation, other possibilities could be tiny batteries that work with sound waves, bending them to produce electricity – batteries that can be injected into the body, without surgery, powering internal devices like pacemakers. Other possibilities could be cost-efficient, light-emitting diodes and lasers, which save a lot of energy, or improving the efficiency of solar cells.

Oxenham has been able to join Teker as he makes conference presentations about their research, most recently at the international conference of the Materials Research Society in Boston in December. Oxenham had his own starring role, presenting “The Impact of Hands-on Experience in Undergraduate Nanotechnology Education.” He’s decided to pursue a master’s degree in material science.

“It’s not like normal science classes where you can do the experiment, but you know what the outcome should be,” Oxenham said. “Some of the discoveries and being able to work with this stuff is so far out there, it’s fascinating.”

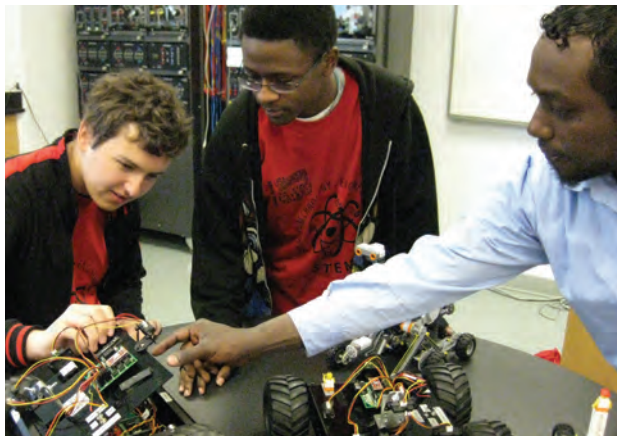

Teker is in the process of involving more undergraduates, which will advance both his research and their educational experience. “I think early, significant exposure is important. Not watching demonstrations, but going to the lab, being involved with the research, hands-on and using all of the available tools,” Teker said.

Nanotechnology research is the wave of the future, so it will be important to have young engineers working on it.

“A lot of researchers around the world are working in these fields, so everybody is doing something,” Teker said. “Sometimes, everybody does research and it adds to the pot and a breakthrough may happen. Only time can tell how valuable our contribution can be.”

STEM@SOWERS, WHERE FRESHMEN EXPLORE MATH AND SCIENCE PASSIONS TOGETHER

By Sidni Giordano '11

At first glance, the sight of dozens of students clustered together in the lounge appears to be a social gathering of some sort. The room is filled with positive energy with an enthusiastic buzz echoing down the halls. Taking a closer listen to the indistinct murmur, however, reveals not the typical conversations about music or gossip, but students tossing around terms such as “oligosaccharide” and “molecular biology.”

Recently, Frostburg State University launched a housing program called STEM@Sowers, which allows incoming freshmen interested in majoring in any of FSU’s science, technology, engineering or mathematics programs to live together in one residence hall. The newly renovated Sowers Hall is a residential opportunity that provides an environment allowing students with similar majors, interests and goals the ability to network with each other through various clubs and attend events and classes together. Interacting with one another on many levels helps to establish a unique bond between residents.

“Half of the people on my floor are in my biology class,” said Erin Benton, a biochemistry major. “Before an exam we are all in the lounge studying together. It’s great,” she said. Not only do they attend classes and study together, but they spend their free time with each other as well.

Group study sessions are not uncommon in Sowers Hall. In fact, one of the desired outcomes for STEM@Sowers is for students to challenge one another to expand their knowledge outside the classroom. Students who transcend the artificial boundaries between in-class and out-of-class learning may acquire many positive benefits, such as advancing their critical thinking skills and intellectual development. Living in an environment that pushes students to analyze the connections between their studies and life outside the classroom, and then apply what they are learning, is one of the many reasons these residents are so close. “There is a sense of community throughout the building. Everybody is having a good time bonding on both a friendship and academic level,” said residential peer mentor Lap Nguyen.

“I have wanted to become a surgeon since 10th grade,” said Josh Elmore, a freshman biotechnology major. “I found out about the Sowers Hall STEM program at orientation and decided that it would be beneficial, so I signed up.”

Fellow Sowers Hall resident and chemistry major, Alison Jordan, agrees on the benefits. “We can’t get enough of each other. After class, we usually hang out or go to Sub Zero and eat together,” she said.

Dr. Eric Moore '00, an assistant professor of FSU’s Department of Physics and Engineering, serves as the faculty coordinator for the program. He believes that networking is an essential underpinning to the success of the program, since working together as a unit helps to encourage achievement, as students are motivated to be on the same level as one another.

“Hopefully they’ll have those connections to then be able to persist through and graduate with a STEM degree. So it’s recruitment and it’s retention that we are hoping for in this program,” Moore said.

The ability to share experiences and frustrations with friends is a priceless benefit enjoyed by the residents of Sowers Hall. “It helps turn down the stress because everyone is going through the same thing, so you don’t feel so isolated,” Benton noted.

To guide students toward success, STEM@Sowers takes a multifaceted approach to spark interest and foster innovation. Although many resources are available to the students, one of the most important is Nguyen, the 24-hour mentor who lives conveniently down the hall. Nguyen serves as the connection between the freshmen residents and Moore.

“I teach them the policies and how to survive college,” said peer mentor Nguyen. “I feel like I am an older brother by teaching them the ins and outs, and where to go to get help. ... I wish I could have lived here my freshmen year.” A junior and pre-dental student himself, Nguyen has already completed a majority of basic level science classes and uses that to his advantage when tutoring his residents. “I really like helping people; I care about all of my residents and want to see them do well,” he said. “They are here for all the right reasons.”

Competition for a textbook scholarship – $600, $500 and $400 accounts at the FSU bookstore funded through the FSU Foundation – is an added incentive. Students earn points by attending Sowers Hall activities, participating in STEM events and becoming members of campus organizations. The opportunity for such experiences is critical as students are then more able to view learning as continuous and transferable to all aspects of life.

The list of available clubs and activities is endless. Elmore is involved in the Pre-med Society, the honors biology organization, known as Tri Beta, and the student chapter of the American Chemical Society. He credits STEM@Sowers. “The program helps me find out about things that I wouldn’t have known about prior,” he said. Recently, Elmore was able to earn points toward the scholarship by volunteering at a local dental service event for underprivileged people. “I got to watch an oral surgery; it was awesome,” he said.

Currently, the program is offered only to those students who live in Sowers Hall. However, the program may become an opportunity for all STEM students; Moore would like to implement a general access program.

“I would have enjoyed participating in something like this,” he said. “I was a commuter student, so it took me a while to make the connections and get involved on campus. My hope is that it grows to be more than just a residential program so that more students will be able to take advantage of what we offer.”

Campaigns have been launched across the country to attract students toward studying STEM-related subjects.

“It’s a rigorous field to get into, but those are the people we need because they are going to go on and do things like find the cure for cancer,” Nguyen said.

FSU-TRAINED TEACHERS ENSURE STEM SUBJECTS STRONG IN FUTURE GENERATIONS

By Becca Ramspott

If a teacher who doesn't understand a subject tries to explain it to a student, that student may not get it, or worse yet, write it off forever as something he or she can't do.

This is one of the reasons why Sherry Hartman, 47, downplayed her interest in math for years.

"I am old enough to have been told that math was a man's field," she said. "I also suffered firsthand the poor math instruction of a well-meaning, hard-working but overextended teacher who was teaching out of his content area during my high school years."

When Hartman '04/M'10 finally encountered professors at Frostburg, "math blossomed for me," she said. "It is so important that our students be taught by teachers who genuinely love their content area. It is especially important that they be taught by teachers who are actually good at math and science, as demonstrated by an undergraduate degree."

Today, Hartman teaches eighth-grade mathematics at Warm Springs Middle School in Morgan County, W.Va. It's a job she got within months of completing her Master of Arts in Teaching degree in secondary mathematics from FSU. She's one of an increasing number of graduates who have fallen in love with science, technology, engineering or math — what are called the STEM subjects — and who have taken advantage of FSU's Master of Arts in Teaching program so they can in turn help other students discover how great they are.

"When I decided to teach, the cost and length of time needed to gain certification seemed a bit overwhelming. The MAT program was the perfect fit for my age and lifestyle," Hartman said.

Now Hartman takes the tools she gained through her FSU Master of Arts in Teaching — like making a lesson applicable to what students already experience every day — and puts them into practice, inspiring future mathematicians.

"I want to make mathematics come alive for my students," Hartman said. "I show them my unabashed love for my subject. I also research their lives. I bring in local history, geography, commerce and the weather. I rewrite word problems to include the names of downtown businesses or farming practices."

It's more than just loving math — it's also about being passionate about what you do and sharing that passion with others.

"At Frostburg, I found not only a great education but also great educators on whom to model my own teaching," Hartman said. "Dr. Edward White and Dr. Mark Hughes were the professors who made me desire to be a teacher. Yes, they loved math ... but they also demonstrated by every action how much they loved their jobs and teaching."

LEARNING ON THE JOB

For graduate student Chadd Sines M'11, his experiences working as a geologist at a geo-environmental firm in 2002 convinced him that going into teaching was an important next step.

"During my work experience in the science field, I dealt with the public on a routine basis," he said. "The majority of my job entailed educating landowners about what was happening with scientific firms working in their community. I feel the public should have more of a knowledge base when dealing with these types of issues so they can make more sound decisions. ... Science is a fascinating and poorly understood field, and this is where I want to make a difference."

An MAT student, Sines also cites his job as being a source of great examples to use in the classroom.

"One advantage I can provide is real-world scenarios from working as a scientist for the past six years," said Sines, 27. "I can provide insight, resources, close-to-home issues and how to incorporate technology into my students' everyday lives."

Sines' first placement through FSU's MAT program was at Meyersdale Area Middle School in Pennsylvania, where he taught seventh-grade earth science and eighth-grade physical science, an experience that forever shaped his love of teaching. While sitting in on some team meetings, he learned the general consensus at the school was that students were losing interest in science at the middle school level. During a brainstorming session on how to motivate these students, Sines came up with an idea.

"I designed a project that allowed the seventh-grade earth science class to present any topic about plate tectonics," he said. "The students had no limitations other than two things: They needed a visual aid, and they needed to have a presentation of three to five minutes. The majority of the student work was astounding, and a portion of it was absolutely incredible! By allowing students to present on any topic, they were constructing models, posters, chemical experiments — yes, in seventh grade — and research papers. I instilled excitement and motivated these students to levels thought unreachable by their teachers."

The confidence he's gained to initiate creative teaching experiences like this is something Sines especially enjoys about FSU's MAT program.

"The program is designed for you to be surrounded by your peers for a substantial amount of time. This promotes feedback and

FSU SUPPORTING STEM THROUGH COMMUNITY OUTREACH

Frostburg's faculty and staff participate in a variety of outreach efforts with students and educators at area schools, encouraging and enhancing the study of STEM subjects. Some highlights:

- On Oct. 23, FSU helped organize and host the Western Maryland Science & Engineering Festival on the FSU campus and at the nearby University of Maryland's Center for Environmental Science Appalachian Lab. A satellite event of the national USA Science and Engineering Festival, the Western Maryland event was open to K-12 students in public and private schools and their parents. Hands-on activities included wildlife forensics, origami, geocaching and a critter corner, as well as challenge events such as egg drops, paper airplane designs or catapults. The event was sponsored by FSU, Allegany County Public Schools and UMCES Appalachian Lab.

dialogue among the faculty and students," he said. "The MAT allows you to practice teaching in front of your peers in a safe environment. This environment is also encouraging, supportive and close-knit; your faculty and classmates want you to succeed."

A TAILOR-MADE OPPORTUNITY

FSU is now fine-tuning its success with its MAT program to create new ways to turn out great teachers who specialize in STEM subjects. In fall 2010, the University's College of Education launched a new Bachelor of Science/Master of Teaching program. The STEM BS/MAT program is structured so that FSU undergraduates who are already majoring in a STEM subject — biology, chemistry, computer science, earth science, engineering, mathematics or physics — have an opportunity to streamline their bachelor's degrees into teaching careers by earning an MAT in just one year.

- More than 30 science teachers from across Maryland converged on FSU this summer for the Improving Teaching Quality Through Training Opportunities in Physics and Physical Science (ITQ/TOPPS) workshop, led by Professor Emeritus Francis Tam and Dr. Eric Moore of the Department of Physics and Engineering. TOPPS is a residential program designed to enliven the teaching of physics and physical science at teachers' home schools. Middle and high school teachers participate in the program to upgrade their content knowledge, integrate technology into their lessons and develop their teaching strategies and practices. The workshop, funded through the Maryland Higher Education Commission, emphasizes teaching methods and scientific content. The content area this year was waves and optics.

- For the second summer, Dr. Matt Ramspott and Phil Allen in FSU's Department of Geography, in collaboration with specialized teacher/trainer and technology staff from the Boards of Education of Allegany and Garrett counties, developed another installment of the "Earth Science Rocks" Teacher Academy. As part of the academy, 20 teachers participated in a variety of lecture-based and hands-on earth science activities, sharpened their vocabulary and scientific and quantitative reasoning skills and developed ideas for practical classroom application. Funding for this project was provided by a Math/Science Partnership grant administered by the Maryland State Department of Education.

According to Dr. Ken Witmer, dean of the College of Education, the STEM BS/MAT takes something that FSU was already doing successfully and makes it so students can take their love of science, technology, engineering and math to the classroom that much sooner.

Candidates who are preparing to be secondary teachers in science or mathematics must earn a degree in their content area, as well as complete the necessary preparation in teaching methods to become licensed, Witmer said. This is especially true of the sciences, in which many additional hours of lab time are required to earn a degree. Teacher candidates often had to stay an extra semester or two to complete their content-area courses and the course work and field work required for teacher certification.

The STEM BS/MAT recognizes that reality and turns it into a benefit. "The Master of Arts in Teaching for STEM majors is designed to allow students to graduate in their STEM field and then earn the master's level degree to obtain teaching credentials," Witmer said. "The MAT is earned in one year, which means in the same amount of time — the five undergraduate years that had typically been required to complete the undergraduate path — the student has a bachelor's degree and a master's degree."

"Additionally, the science and math job opportunities for teachers are great ... sometimes even with higher pay than those in other subjects," he said.

The STEM BS/MAT program has nine students in its first year, but Witmer expects that number to grow, judging by the e-mails he receives inquiring about the program.

Bridges Named National TRIO Achiever

When he first enrolled at FSU, Tony Bridges ‘00

wasn’t sure if the University was the right fit for him. A first-generation college student from inner Baltimore City, he struggled with Western Maryland’s rural location, his class work and managing the daunting freedom of being away from home.

Bridges’ mother had always been a huge inspiration in his life, and he didn’t want to fail her by not doing well at Frostburg.

“She had a way of letting you know when she was extremely proud of you or terribly disappointed . . . and you did not want to get that ‘terribly disappointed’ talk,” he said. “I think all moms have that power.”

Luckily, with his mother’s support and direction, and the right combination of resources at FSU, Bridges discovered that a college experience at Frostburg could make a huge difference in his future. Taking the advice of Melodie Gale, FSU’s assistant director of Admissions and minority recruiter at the time, he connected with FSU’s Student Support Services, a federal TRIO program that provides students from disadvantaged backgrounds with resources such as professional tutoring, career guidance and workshops on study skills and time management.

Today, Bridges is the chief of staff for Maryland’s Governor’s Office of Community Initiatives and was honored as one of only six national TRIO Achievers in 2010.

“Through Student Support Services, I established a relationship with staff I still have to this very day,” he said. “If it wasn’t for the support I received through the program, I honestly believe I would have either transferred out of Frostburg or just left the school.”

Gale also encouraged Bridges to apply for the Ronald E. McNair Postbaccalaureate Achievement Program, which allowed him to spend the summer of his junior year prepping for the GRE and working on a major project with his McNair mentor at the University of Maryland, College Park.

“My mentor through the McNair program encouraged me in both personal and professional pursuits, and I am still reminded of our talks — not only about research, but about life in general,” Bridges said.

Following his roommate’s example, Bridges also got involved with FSU’s Student Government Association and the Campus Activities Board (now University Programming Council), experiences that led to some of his favorite Frostburg memories, like meeting the poet Maya Angelou and helping to bring Grammy-award-winning hip-hop artists The Roots to campus. These experiences complemented his major in mass communication with a focus on public relations.

“I realized that the more I involved myself in on-campus activities, the more I could shape what was happening at the University, and because of that I began to encourage my peers to get involved as well,” he said. “The experiences I had as a campus leader to bring people together helped mold me into the person I am today.”

In Bridges’ role with the Maryland’s Governor’s Office of Community Initiatives, he has the opportunity to support and serve communities all over the state.

“What I enjoy most is being able to connect with people from all walks of life to ensure they have a voice in government,” he said. “It’s great to be able to partner with communities, nonprofits, government entities and faith-based organizations on areas of common interest, all with the goal of ensuring the quality of life for the people of Maryland.”

No one could be prouder than Gale, who, with the help of Harriet Douglas, FSU’s director of SSS, nominated Bridges for the National TRIO Achiever award, a recognition he received last summer.

“For a TRIO educator, Tony is the student who makes us continuously work hard for the students we serve,” Gale said. “He is the reason that we fight to keep TRIO programs funded and in the spotlight to show what our students can achieve with proper support and guidance.”

Bridges’ mother passed away in 2004, but “her proudest moment was seeing me graduate from Frostburg in 2000,” Bridges said. “Everything I do today is based on whether or not I feel like my mom will give me that proud talk or disappointing talk.”

And in addition to his mother’s ever-present memory, Bridges also has Frostburg in his corner, now and always, to inspire his success.

“St. Thomas Aquinas wrote that ‘any seeker of a higher truth, or of God, must eventually and inevitably return to the idea of community,’” Bridges said. “The TRIO program taught me the true meaning of that quote, and what I do today is inspired by not only by my biological family, but also my TRIO family.”

Frostburg: Take 5 YouTube Contest Yields New Videos!

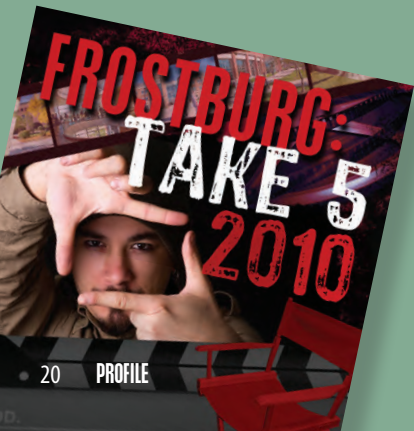

Thanks to a grant from the FSU Foundation and the support of the FSU Alumni Association, FSU once again held the Frostburg: Take 5 YouTube Contest, which invited students and alumni to submit videos and compete for awards.

“FSU first organized this YouTube contest back in 2007; we decided to bring it back this year because we wanted FSU’s students and alumni to add their creativity, their ingenuity and most importantly, their voices to the collective story of why Frostburg is a great place to go to college,” said Becca Ramspott, FSU’s public information specialist in Technology and New Media. “The videos have been really wonderful for marketing the University in an authentic way, and the contest has helped our students and alumni gain professional experience using social media.”

Six entries were submitted, and three cash prizes were awarded: first ($500), second ($250) and third place ($125). The contest also included a special People’s Choice Award of $375, which was determined through an online vote by viewers through the FSU YouTube Channel. Awards were announced during a ceremony held at the Lyric Theatre on Dec. 1 featuring refreshments and a live performance by Eclectic II, the student hip-hop group whose video submission, “Celebration,” won second place in the contest.

Carolyn Kilkus ’06 snagged the People’s Choice Award and a special alumni award for “Frostburg State University: Building Your Future,” a video featuring alumni who shared how FSU helped them get to where they are today.

FSU Rises to the Challenge
A Week in the Athletic Spotlight

By Noah Becker M'06

On Monday, Nov. 8, at around 8 a.m., FSU learned it was one of eight schools nationwide selected to host an NCAA volleyball regional tournament. Seven schools would compete starting Friday – four days away.

That was the first of a happy set of challenges dropped onto an already hectic fall schedule for the FSU Athletic Department that week. By week's end, FSU would be welcoming 11 schools to campus for season-ending competition.

Here is how the FSU Athletic Department, a staff of full-time coaches, administrative staff and graduate assistants, handled its week in the spotlight.

Monday, Nov. 8 ... It Begins

The busiest week of the year started when FSU learned it would eventually welcome four schools from Pennsylvania (Juniata, Lebanon Valley, Pitt-Bradford and Cabrini), two from New York (SUNY Cortland and Ithaca) and one from Ohio (Case Western) for the NCAA Volleyball Regional, the first time in school history that FSU has been selected to host.

However, FSU was already hosting the season's final football game, the Regents Cup against Salisbury. It also happened to be senior day for seven Bobcats playing their final FSU game, a meaningful time during this 38th meeting between in-state rivals.

Fairmont State was also coming for a swim meet on Saturday.

If that weren't enough, late Monday, the Athletic Department learned that the women's soccer team had captured the top seed in the ECAC South Regional Tournament, meaning Frostburg would host the first round Wednesday evening, followed by the semifinals and finals Saturday and Sunday – along with football, volleyball and swimming.

It was time to scramble. Classes and intramurals were rescheduled to make way for the games. Following a mid-afternoon conference call with the NCAA, several groups, including athletic training, game management, sports information and the equipment room staff, met to learn about their respective duties.

3-0, behind a pair of early goals from senior Heather Fleishell. The victory propelled the Bobcats into the semifinals hosting Alvernia (Pa.) Saturday evening.

Thursday, Nov. 11

The final day of preparation was the beginning of the pre-tournament practice schedules for the volleyball regional. Each team was given a set amount of time to practice in the arena.

As the volleyball teams arrived, staff members greeted them and guided them to their respective locker rooms. All eight teams practiced during the day.

That evening, FSU welcomed the NCAA Tournament representative, tournament officials, coaches and other team representatives to a pre-tournament meeting. The Athletic Department staff briefed the group on details that had been hammered out all week.

Friday, Nov. 12

All the preparation, meetings and walk-throughs, as well as hundreds of e-mails and phone calls, came to fruition Friday morning as staff began showing up as early as 6 a.m. for the NCAA opening round.

Teams were greeted as they got off the bus, fans began to slowly trickle into the PE Center and the arena came to life. Within an hour and a half of the 12:30 p.m. match between Lebanon Valley and Ithaca, music began to play over the sound system and fans and parents filed into the arena to watch the women begin warm-ups.

The first three matches of the day went off without a hitch, so staff were able to relax and take in the atmosphere. Fans and teams came and went and the FSU faculty, staff and students stopped by to check out the action, even when the Bobcats weren't playing.

In the last match of the day at 8 p.m., the FSU volleyball team met Pitt-Bradford, defeating the Panthers 3-0 in a match that lasted just over an hour and 15 minutes. The victory served as the final exclamation point on a very busy and successful opening round. One day of competition down and two to go.

Saturday, Nov. 13

Football kicked off the busiest day, starting at 1 p.m. with the annual Regents' Cup football game between Frostburg and Salisbury. When it was all said and done, Salisbury ran away with the game 37-6 behind 410 yards on the ground. Senior Anthony King ran for the Bobcats' only score, a one-yard jolt late in the third quarter.

Swimming was the second to get under way at 2 p.m. at Bobcat Natatorium. FSU lost to the Fairmont Falcons on both the men's and women's sides, despite seven swimmers with two or more top-three finishes.

Women's soccer and volleyball were next as both teams hosted a pair of events to wrap up the day's contests.

The volleyball regional began as Juniata and Lebanon Valley squared off in the first semifinal at 3:30 p.m. While the first volleyball match was still under way in the arena, the ECAC Women's Soccer South Regional tournament was starting at Bobcat Stadium. FSU hosted the ECAC tournament for the second time in three years after a successful regular season.

Back in Bobcat Arena, Frostburg then hosted SUNY Cortland in the second volleyball semifinal, an epic battle that lasted two hours with a lead that went back and forth from the first serve. The Bobcats eventually pulled out a 3-2, come-from-behind victory against the Red Dragons in front of another packed arena. The win would pit FSU against Juniata in the regional championship at 4 p.m. Sunday.

As the volleyball team was celebrating its win, the Bobcat women's soccer team was clinging to a slim 1-0 lead over Alvernia in the second semifinal. Freshman Chelsea Paskowski scored the game's only goal in the ninth minute and would eventually be the game winner as FSU went on to claim a 1-0 win. Frostburg would face Marywood in the ECAC Championship on Sunday at 1 p.m. After the second day of competition, the FSU community was excited and relieved to see both Bobcat teams in the Sunday championship games.

Sunday, Nov. 14

Shortly after noon, both Marywood and Frostburg marched to Bobcat Stadium to warm up for the ECAC Championship. After an hour, the whistle sounded.

The title game was closer than anticipated; neither team scored during the match, and it headed to a shootout. Marywood connected on all four shots, while FSU made just one of three. Having won the ECAC Championship, Marywood charged the field in celebration.

After enduring a tough loss at the stadium, the Bobcat fans then shifted attention to Bobcat Arena as FSU and Juniata warmed up for the volleyball regional championship at 3 p.m.

The arena was filled with fans and excitement for FSU's first-ever regional contest. The winner would advance to the national finals in St. Louis, Mo., the following weekend. However, the Bobcats had an uphill battle from the start: They had never defeated Juniata in all their meetings. Despite a valiant effort from FSU, the Eagles went on to claim a 3-0 victory and advance to the finals.

Following the match, the Bobcat volleyball players received their tournament awards to a standing ovation from the fans, parents and fellow students.

Within hours, the Cordts PE Center and Athletic Department staff would return to normal, looking toward the winter sports season. It began with a four-team women's basketball tournament at Bobcat Arena ... the very next weekend. 🐾

Correction

Because of an editor's error, an article in the Fall 2010 Profile incorrectly stated that Dr. Bob Lewis initiated FSU's track & field and cross country teams. While Lewis built the programs significantly, they were in existence prior to his arrival at Frostburg.

Stephens All-American on Court, in Classroom

Volleyball player Sarah Stephens has completed her career at FSU, but her many accomplishments will not be forgotten soon. Stephens has excelled on the court and in her studies as a business administration major.

In her senior year, Stephens led the Bobcats to a 34-4 overall record and a perfect 8-0 record in their first year as a member of the Capital Athletic Conference.

Along with being named the CAC Player of the Year, Stephens was honored as an American Volleyball Coaches Association Honorable Mention All-American. She ranked 16th in the nation in kills per set (4.35) and 20th in points per set (4.87). Her 570 kills were not only good enough to rank her first in the CAC, but also nearly 200 ahead of second place.

Stephens finished her career ranked third in school history in career kills (1,598) and fifth in career digs (1,159). In her four years, the Bobcats posted an overall record of 114-26, won four consecutive conference tournament titles and appeared in four NCAA tournaments.

Academically, Stephens is just as impressive. She carries a 3.96 grade point average in business administration. A three-time All-Allegheny Mountain Collegiate Conference academic honoree and seven-time Dean's List student, she was also named to the 2010 ESPN The Magazine Academic All-American Volleyball Team as selected by the College Sports Information Directors of America in November. She is also a two-time CoSIDA ESPN The Magazine Academic All-District award winner.

Men’s Basketball Wins Pride of Maryland Title

Very few teams can open their seasons with a championship. The FSU men’s basketball team did just that as it kicked off the 2010-11 season in stellar fashion at the 2010 Pride of Maryland Tournament with a perfect 3-0 record and its first Pride of Maryland trophy. The tournament, in its sixth year, features Maryland’s nine NCAA Division III schools. Each year, eight of the nine square off, with state bragging rights on the line. FSU started off with a 61-54 win over McDaniel College (Westminster) in the season opener for both teams. The Bobcats shook off a sluggish first half and outscored the Green Terror 34-21 in the second half. The Bobcats narrowly escaped with a 74-72 win over Stevenson (Baltimore) in the semifinals. FSU trailed at the half, 47-38, but rebounded to hold the lead several times. In the title game, Frostburg knocked off 11th-ranked St. Mary’s (St. Mary’s City), 56-54. The contest was a defensive struggle. FSU led by as many as nine points in the second half and made its free throws down the stretch for the victory. The Bobcats’ run to the championship trophy was an unprecedented accomplishment, having won only three games in three previous tournament appearances.

Fall Sports

Men’s Cross Country

Highlight: Men captured sixth at the Capital Athletic Conference championship meet. Recap: The Bobcat men were led by Gavin Caupp and Patrick Mead. Caupp posted a top finish of 16th at Shippensburg and will return for his senior year in 2011. Freshman Patrick Mead was also a top performer, posting a 22nd-place run at Elizabethtown, helping the Bobcats to a sixth-place team finish. The Bobcats finished 36th at the NCAA Mideast Regional meet. Next Season: With just two seniors graduating from this team, the Bobcats look to have an experienced group of veterans for 2011.

Women’s Cross Country

Highlight: Women finished second at the CAC championship meet. Recap: Frostburg placed a pair of women on the All-CAC teams as junior Anne Patron was named to the first team, while senior Jessica O’Neil was a second-teamer. Both finished their seasons on strong notes. Patron finished third in back-to-back weeks at Elizabethtown and at the CAC Championships. O’Neil placed ninth at Elizabethtown and 12th at the CAC Championships. Next Season: Patron leads the squad, which returns the entire team except for O’Neil.

Field Hockey

Record: 3-17 overall, 1-6 CAC Highlight: The team ranked 11th in NCAA Division III for saves per game (12.65). Recap: The 2010 season was one of transition for the Bobcats as it was their first in the CAC after competing as an independent for the past few years. Although posting just a 1-6 league record, the team looks to build on the experience of the 2010 season as it continues against a high level of competition. FSU posted wins over Hood (5-0), Goucher (3-1) and St. Vincent (2-1). Sophomore goalkeeper Maggie Edwards finished the season ranked eighth in DIII in saves per game (12.1), with a total of 242 saves on the season. Next Season: With a young roster, the Bobcats return all but three starters next year, including Edwards, as they compete in their second season in the CAC.

▲ Amanda Wharton

Football

Record: 2-8 overall, 1-2 All-Atlantic Central Football Conference Highlight: The Bobcats placed nine players on the ACFC teams, including two on the first team. Recap: Frostburg faced one of its toughest schedules ever in 2010 as the Bobcats faced four teams ranked in the top 25. FSU dropped its first three games to No. 3 Wesley, 48-0; No. 25 Randolph-Macon, 48-14; and No. 25 Alfred, 49-24. Frostburg later lost to No. 23 St. John Fisher, 38-6. The Bobcats defeated NCAA qualifier Christopher Newport, 33-31, and ACFC opponent Apprentice, 25-20. Seniors Patrick Fears and Terryl Monroe grabbed First Team All-Atlantic Central Football Conference honors to highlight nine players on the list, including five on the second team and two honorable mentions. Next Season: The Bobcats return 19 starters from this year’s roster, including quarterback Josh Volpe, as they prepare for their first year of competition in the Empire 8 conference.

Men’s Soccer

Record: 4-10-3, 1-4-3 CAC Highlight: The Bobcats earned a win and three ties in the highly competitive CAC. Recap: The Frostburg men’s soccer team finished its first year in the CAC with a 1-4-3 conference record and an overall mark of 4-10-3. The Bobcats were in contention for a spot in the conference playoffs until the final week of the season, but could not quite get over the hump. FSU pushed No. 18 Salisbury into overtime before falling, 1-0, in late September. A pair of sophomore forwards, Shawn Baker and Dillon Muise, tied for the team lead in goals with four apiece. Next Season: With seven returning starters, Baker and Muise will look to lead a young Frostburg squad to a berth in the CAC tournament.

2010 FSU Volleyball — A Season of Records

The Frostburg State University volleyball team posted a year to remember in 2010, reaching milestones and setting marks that won’t be topped anytime soon.

Sixth-year head coach Peter Letourneau guided the Bobcats to their second-straight 30-win season with a 34-4 overall mark. FSU also tossed in a perfect 8-0 record in its first year in the Capital Athletic Conference. The team’s 13-0 start, with nine shutouts, open of the 2010 campaign was also the best start in program history. The Bobcats earned a fourth-straight trip to the NCAA Tournament and were selected to host an NCAA Regional for the first time in school history. After defeating Pitt-Bradford (3-0) and SUNY Cortland (3-2), Frostburg advanced to the championship match against Juniata. The Bobcats eventually fell to the Eagles, 3-0, for a runner-up finish in the regionals. Following the season’s conclusion, FSU received votes in the final American Volleyball Coaches Association (AVCA) Top 25 poll.

Statistically Speaking

The Bobcats turned in some very impressive statistical numbers in 2010. FSU finished 20th in the NCAA Division III ranks in hitting percentage (.248) and 32nd in kills per set (12.76). FSU led the CAC in both hitting percentage and kills. Frostburg was also fifth in the country in win/loss percentage (0.895).

All-Americans

Senior Sarah Stephens and junior Kylie Carrington formed one of the most dangerous offensive duos in the country, and they were recognized for their impressive contributions this fall. Both were named AVCA All-American honorable mention selections, marking the first time in school history that the FSU volleyball team has had two All-Americans in the same year. The duo were also AVCA All-Region selections.

Career Records

Several members of this year’s team left their marks on the FSU record books. Stephens wrapped up her FSU playing career in fine fashion, moving into third all-time in career kills (1,653). Her 570 kills this past season are good for fifth in the single-season record book. She’s ranked 16th in the nation in kills per set (4.35), 20th in points per set (4.87) and led the CAC.

Carrington is quickly moving up the career assists chart. She handed out conference-best 1,320 — good for fourth in a single season — and she is second in all-time assists with 3,668. She is ranked 20th in the nation in assists per set (10.56). In the NCAA opening-round match against Pitt-Bradford, Carrington handed out 39 assists and moved into second all-time in career assists. Through her first three years on the team, she averaged 1,223 assists per season, and if she continues at that pace, she should pass the all-time mark (4,105) toward the middle of the 2011 season.

Jamie Thomas set the single season record for service aces with 92 during her senior year. She started her senior season in sixth place on the career list and moved all the way to second with 237 aces in her four-year career.

CAC Player and Coach of the Year

Despite its first year as a member of the CAC, Frostburg seemingly cleaned house in the post-season league awards. Stephens was tabbed the CAC’s Player of the Year after her dominating offensive numbers. Meanwhile, Bobcat head coach Letourneau was selected as the league’s Coach of the Year after guiding the team to a perfect 8-0 record in the conference. Carrington was placed on the All-CAC first team while Jamie Thomas was selected to the second team. Next season, the Bobcats return four key players, including All-American Carrington, as they look to continue their success into their second year in the CAC. 🐾

President Gibraltar presents NCAA tournament balls to assistant coach Barbara Letourneau and head coach Peter Letourneau.

Dear Friends,
We met the goal but there is still important work to do.

On behalf of the Steering Committee for Staking Our Claim: The Campaign for Frostburg, I am pleased to provide you with very good news about the ongoing progress of our campaign. As of Jan. 24, the campaign passed its $15 million goal, nearly six months before the June 30 deadline. This is very exciting, and demonstrates the hard work, commitment and tireless efforts of our friends, alumni, donors, FSU faculty, staff and students.

Quincy Crawford '65

In the following pages you will find our Honor Roll of Donors for this campaign. We are so grateful to the many Frostburg alumni, friends, faculty and staff who have stepped up their giving in this current economic climate. Please know that our campaign's success depended on your involvement and support, as has everything the campaign has accomplished on behalf of Frostburg State University.

It will be essential to maintain our momentum in this final year of the campaign. With the uncertainties of state funding and the nation's economy overall, Frostburg State University and its students need everyone's support more than ever. We remain committed to raising additional funds to support our students and our University, but we need your help.

Please, make your gift today. We've made it easy for you: give online at www.frostburg.edu/makeagift or use the attached envelope.

Thank you.

FSU Foundation Reaches Campaign Goal

At a gala celebration honoring leading donors during the recent Leadership and Homecoming Weekend, Frostburg State University and the FSU Foundation, Inc., set the stage for the final push of Staking Our Claim: The Campaign for Frostburg. At that point, early November, the campaign was less than $1.2 million short of its $15 million goal. Less than three months later, that goal was reached.

"We owe it to those who have come before us to continue Frostburg's legacy of putting quality education within reach of students who will benefit from a college degree and make the most of it," said President Gibraltar to the approximately 130 guests assembled in the historic Lyric Theatre on Main Street in Frostburg. "Persistence is what has led Frostburg State to where it is today. It is what will continue to push this institution to re-define itself as a distinctive and distinguished university."

In the year since the 2009 Leadership and Homecoming Weekend, $3 million had been raised for the campaign that will come to a close June 30, 2011.

"This evening is an opportunity to consider how we will ensure the future of this fine institution that each of us embraces with admiration and affection," FSUF President Sam Griffith told the gathering, "to determine what our collective legacy will be in moving this University to a level of national prominence."

Several individuals and organizations were additionally singled out for recognition. Special honorees during the evening included:

- Carey and Mary Beth Fisher were honored for their leadership support of the unrestricted Annual Fund. Carey is a 1975 Frostburg graduate and Mary Beth graduated in 1976. Their support of the Annual Fund dates back 20 years, and they have given more than $30,000 over the course of the campaign.
- The corporate honoree was Daly Computers, represented by Daly's CEO Ryan Yu and his wife, Daly legal counsel

Robert Kesler, center, a member of the President's Leadership Circle and the inaugural recipient of the Dennis and Dawn Thomas Presidential Leadership Scholarship, meets the Thomases.

Sarah Galvin, recipient of the Lawrence McDonald Scholarship for Clarinet Studies, performs with Dr. Mark Gallagher, her faculty mentor and the donor of the scholarship. Gallagher established this scholarship in honor of his own mentor from his undergraduate days.

The newly renovated Lyric Theatre was the stunning setting for this year's gala. Above, the energetic FSU Vocal Jazz Ensemble entertains the dinner guests. Below, President Gibraltar expresses his gratitude to donors.

Margaret Yu. The Yus and their colleagues learned about FSU through Daly's business relationship, providing many of the computers that are used by the University. Daly has provided $25,000 in scholarship funds, much of which has supported FSU's growing transfer population. (See story, page 23)

- Sandi Saville was the first donor under a new program called Presidential Merit Scholarships, created with the intention of recruiting more high academic achievers to FSU. With a $25,000 commitment, she established the Sandra K. Saville Presidential Merit Scholarship for the Arts to benefit aspiring artists. (See story, page 11)
- Dennis '65 and Dawn Thomas, longtime supporters of leadership initiatives at FSU, most recently established the Dennis and Dawn Thomas Presidential Leadership Scholarship, benefiting members of the FSU President's Leadership Circle who have an interest in public policy and public service.

- Carl "Bucky" and Jane Belt, with the Belt Group of Companies, made a campaign gift of more than $100,000 to be divided between athletics, which rely solely on gifts and student fees for support, and unrestricted funds. Bucky Belt is also a member of the FSU Foundation Board of Directors and the Staking Our Claim Campaign Steering Committee.

Gibraltar praised those who were honored, saying, "You have been heroes to our students, who above all else, are the reason for everything we seek to accomplish at Frostburg State University."

A particular emphasis was placed on showing donors the real lives they have touched through their generosity. Members of the gala audience heard from two scholarship recipients, SGA President Ian Spears and Robert Kesler. They were also able to enjoy the performing talents of Sarah Galvin and her faculty mentor, Dr. Mark Gallagher, soprano Britany Poindexter, as well as the members of the Jazz Ensemble. Galvin and eight members of the Jazz Ensemble are also scholarship recipients.

The Old Main Society Campaign Committee and the FSU Foundation, Inc., hosted a holiday reception in December. Among those attending were, from left, Sharon Robinson, Kathy Burkey and Dr. Alice Manicur. Guests also enjoyed a performance of A Christmas Carol featuring FSU theatre students.

Old Main Society Welcomes Youngest Member, Age 27

The FSU Foundation’s Old Main Society, for those who have remembered FSU in their estate planning, includes many people who are well established in their lives, those thinking seriously about retirement and the legacies they will leave. It also includes a 27-year-old U.S. Navy petty officer third class, the Society’s youngest member by far.

Joe Detrick attended FSU before he joined the Navy, and he loved every minute of it. While he regrets not completing his degree, he was itching to see the world beyond his native Allegany County, and joining the Navy has proved to be a great choice for him as well.

Joe Detrick

“That was the best year and a half of my life,” he said of his time at Frostburg, which followed two years at Allegany College of Maryland. “Growing up, anybody I knew who ever amounted to anything graduated from Frostburg.”

Joining the Navy with stellar ASVAB (Armed Services Vocational Aptitude Battery) scores, he’s now a sonar technician who just finished a deployment to the Middle East on the destroyer USS Winston Churchill. The armed services encourage their members to keep their affairs in order, so even though he’s only in his 20s, Detrick decided he wanted to make sure that people and organizations he cared about would be supported.

The Allegany County native chose FSU as one of the organizations to receive his support because he loved his time there, and because he knew of FSU’s value in the culture, education and diversity it brings to his home area. But he also chose Frostburg because he sometimes wonders whether, if he had not had to work three jobs to stay in school, he might have been able to take more advantage of campus activities, making him a little less restless.

“I might have stayed to finish my degree,” he said. “Now maybe someone else can have that advantage.”

Detrick is still planning to earn his bachelor’s degree. He’s now taking online classes through Troy University, working toward a degree in history, and he plans to continue on to earn his master’s. He hasn’t given up on the idea of a diploma that says Frostburg State University.

For more information about remembering FSU in estate planning with the Old Main Society, contact Cherie Krug, director of Major Gifts, at ckrug@frostburg.edu or 301.687.4161 or visit foundation.frostburg.edu.

Arts Lover Puts the Spotlight on Academic Excellence

The performing arts have always made Sandi Saville's heart race. The love affair began when Saville joined her high school's Ushers Committee, which gave her an opportunity to meet the visiting artists who performed there.

Sandi Saville

"The Vienna Boys Choir performed each year and some of the members stayed at our house," Saville said. "From then on I was smitten with live performance."

Her passion for the arts continued into college.

"I roomed with a ballet dancer at WVU who dragged me to Pittsburgh to wait in line at four in the morning to get tickets for Margot Fontaine and Rudolph Nureyev – I was totally hooked," she said.

Saville eventually moved to Alaska, where she practiced law for 28 years and continued her arts advocacy by serving on the State Council for the Arts, including a few years as chair. Her creativity also led her to New York, where she studied at the International Center for Photography.

Today, Saville is interested in supporting the arts through higher education – both as an instructor and as a dedicated and generous advocate. She teaches "Legal Issues in the Arts" in Frostburg State University's Department of Music and serves on the Board of Directors for the FSU Foundation, Inc. Saville is also a leadership donor to FSU's Annual Fund and supporter of other campus initiatives, including the Friends of Music and the Center for Creative Writing.

Saville recently recognized an opportunity to combine her experience and knowledge of the arts and arts advocacy with her leadership in FSU's fundraising efforts by creating the Sandra K. Saville Presidential Merit Scholarship for the Arts with a $25,000 commitment, part of the $34,000 she has generously given to Staking Our Claim: The Campaign for Frostburg. The Sandra K. Saville Presidential Merit Scholarship for the Arts supports FSU students majoring in the performing or visual arts who have an overall grade point average of at least 3.5. It is the first scholarship created as part of the Presidential Merit Scholarships program. (See related story, page 27.)

Emeriti Faculty Working to Endow Merit Scholarship

FSU's emeriti faculty have answered the call to reward academic excellence with financial support. A group of emeriti faculty with representation from all three of FSU's Colleges has established the Emeriti Faculty of Frostburg State University Merit Scholarship Fund to recruit and retain top-notch FSU students with academic promise.

Cumulative commitments of more than $9,000 have already been received.

When the scholarship is endowed, recipients of this fund will be full-time transfer students with a cumulative GPA of 3.5, with financial need as a secondary consideration and the expectation that those who benefit from this fund will maintain full-time status with at least a B average.

STAKING OUR CLAIM
THE CAMPAIGN FOR FROSTBURG

CHILL Begins
Third Year With
AZ Support

Thanks to a generous contribution from AstraZeneca Pharmaceuticals LP, FSU’s CHILL (“Creating Healthy, Informed, Lasting Lifestyles”) is in its third year of helping FSU students make wellness a part of their FSU experience.

Originally launched in September 2008, CHILL has successfully developed and organized various educational outreach activities focused on health and wellness, including workshops led by nationally renowned fitness expert Scott Cole, a “Biggest Loser” student wellness competition and campus community walks organized in affiliation with FSU events and activities.

As a key focus in its efforts, CHILL has also offered bio-medical screenings, which have helped thousands of students become more informed on how to take charge of and improve their personal health. CHILL is exploring innovative ways to integrate health and wellness into the campus culture. This fall, FSU debuted bWell, a residential community where students can support their own health and well-being through an academic year-long living experience.

AstraZeneca’s total contribution of over $900,000 ensures that the mission to make FSU a national model for campus health and wellness can continue. “It is so rewarding to see how excited this campus and our community are for wellness. Within just two years, CHILL has become an important part of FSU’s overall focus on health and wellness as an institution,” said April Baer, project coordinator for University Wellness. “We hope to grow and provide resources for our students to inspire them to lead healthier, happier lives.”

FSU Foundation, Inc., Welcomes Russ Younkens '68 to Board of Directors

The Frostburg State University Foundation, Inc., Board of Directors has welcomed a new member, Russell Younkens, of Dunkirk, Md. Younkens taught in the Prince George's County Public School System and mentored youth through coaching. He retired at the rank of sergeant after 20 years as a police officer at the Seat Pleasant District Station. Since his retirement, Younkens has worked as a supervisor and project manager at the Prince George's County Department of Environmental Resources. Younkens, a member of the Steering Committee for FSUF's Staking Our Claim: The Campaign for Frostburg, has raised much-needed money for athletics. Russell and his wife, Penny, have contributed more than $61,000 thus far for athletics and the Annual Fund. They started the Russell and Penny Younkens General Athletic Fund, the Russell and Penny Younkens Academic Support Fund and the Russell W. Younkens Endowed Scholarship Fund. "We'd like the brightest and the best to go into teaching. . . . In physical education and coaching, you learn life skills such as organization and motivating people," said Younkens.

Scholarships in Mass Comm, Health and P.E. Bring Phipps Full Circle

When Dr. Tyra Phipps ’71, a professor in the FSU Department of Mass Communication, started to consider establishing scholarships at her alma mater, her considerations took her full circle from her life today to her days as a student in the old Compton Hall.

Tyra Phipps '71

Phipps recently set up two scholarships: the Marjorie C. Phipps Mass Communication Scholarship, in memory of her mother who died on Mother’s Day last year, and the Tyra C. Phipps Scholarship, for students in the Department of Health and Physical Education. The scholarship in her mother’s name serves students who want to study in the department that Tyra Phipps helped build. Her mother was a big fan of many of the students that she got to know or heard about over the years. “She loved my stories about the students,” Phipps said. “She loved their perspective.” The Tyra Phipps Scholarship serves students in the Department of Health and Physical Education, reflecting her past as a Frostburg student-athlete and her present as a multiple sclerosis patient who is helped by health care workers and physical therapists, the “health” piece of the discipline. “I wanted to be a PE major, but gymnastics made me dizzy. I knew something was wrong by then,” she said. She moved her major to the other half of the building, in the Department of Speech and Theatre, but she took every other class in the PE Department that she could. “That department helped me so much. This was in the days of Janet Thomas and Carol Cleveland, Sharon Irwin, Susan Eisel, the Surgents.” The support she received from them and others in Frostburg athletics helped her in her uphill battle to play on Frostburg’s varsity tennis team. This was in the pre-Title IX days when there was no women’s team at Frostburg or at most other colleges. Despite early resistance, she became a member of the Frostburg men’s team. After that, her teammates, her coach Ken Kutler and then-President Nelson Guild stood by her when other teams tried to refuse to play against “the girl.” “Because I kept winning,” she said with a smile. Phipps went on to have a successful tennis career, ranked nationally and competing against the best players in the 1970s. But when she was 27, multiple sclerosis struck hard, paralyzing all but one arm, albeit temporarily. She recovered from that attack and was able to play tennis for some years afterwards, but she eventually had to find another career. In her case, the chronic disease has only affected her physically, not harming her cognitive abilities, but it has worsened over the years, as is the nature of the type of MS that she has. “It’s just a mean disease,” she said. After FSU, she earned a master’s degree and doctorate, and her career took some turns before she returned to FSU as a faculty member in 1989, where she was one of the originators of FSU’s Mass Communication program. After she broke her pelvis in a fall in 2006, she spent her recovery time writing a novel about issues close to her life and her heart. Folded Notes, which is available on Amazon.com, begins with Kassie, a nationally ranked tennis player, driven to crisis by a sudden bout of paralysis. Her marriage falls apart when her husband can’t handle his wife’s MS diagnosis. The rest of the book deals with what she learns about herself and those around her and how she decides to rebuild her life. That much mimics Phipps’ experience, but it’s a work of fiction. Kassie isn’t Tyra, and the book is designed to tell a different story, along with perhaps some wishful thinking. (For example, Kassie’s doctors all have movie-star good looks.) She dedicated the royalties from her book toward the scholarship. She quickly realized that would not be enough, but her book has started a conversation about MS, especially among her high school classmates in Florida, including several who had loved ones with multiple sclerosis diagnoses. “A lot of people have been touched by MS,” she said. Despite the limitations brought on by her disease, her underlying health remains good. Phipps continues to teach, mostly in an online format, and to supervise interns in the Mass Comm Department. Technology and student assistants help with the physical tasks that her MS makes increasingly difficult. It is the need she sees among her students, those she’s known over the years and those she interacts with today, that inspired her to set up the scholarships. “The stress that they have now is so great. I didn’t have to work all my summers. I just played tennis,” she said. “I just figured, ‘Maybe I can help out with scholarships.’”

Football Alum Helps Support Student Wellness and Athletic Performance

The victories Frostburg’s football team enjoyed in the 1970s did more than just raise school spirit – they also helped raise team members’ awareness of how to be successful long after the last touchdown. Frostburg football alumnus Col. Donald J. White ’75 is a classic example of how a strong foundation in sports led to a big win in life after college. White, who looms large in Frostburg’s memory as one of its greatest linebackers, translated the insight he gained from college athletics into an awe-inspiring career in aerospace and operational physiology.

“In team sports, the number one thing you have to understand is your own personal boundaries and how those boundaries fit into an organizational structure,” White said.

White went on to apply his knowledge of team dynamics, performance management, organizational leadership and health and wellness to a variety of increasingly high-level positions as a civilian and in the U.S. Air Force. His work has included everything from being an Air Force test parachutist to running the fighter aircrew acceleration training program, cockpit and crew integration program and experimental life support in the Air Force’s Armstrong Laboratory. He has also served as the USAF School of Aerospace Medicine’s director of education and training in the Department of Aerospace Physiology.

Today, White is the director of Research, Development and Innovation in the Air Force’s Office of the Assistant Surgeon General for Modernization. These programs shape Air Force medicine and include force health protection, operational and expeditionary medicine, en route care and human performance. White is an adjunct faculty member of the USAF School of Aerospace Medicine and adjunct assistant professor of Preventive Medicine and Biometrics at the Uniformed Services University of Health Sciences. And he hasn’t forgotten the rewarding experiences he had years ago at FSU. He’s quick to acknowledge how much he loved going to school at Frostburg.

“I think the education I received was outstanding. I respected the various professors, teachers . . . and they respected the students,” he said. “You could talk to most of the academic instructors in a personal way; they would receive you as a student and listen to what you have to say and sometimes redirect you, re-vector you,” he said. “A lot of students have a lot of thrust, but no vector.”

White is also interested in – and increasingly alarmed by – how unhealthy young people are, and the way this affects their performance and overall long-term success as individuals.

Dr. Janet Wasson and Col. Donald J. White ’ 75

White and his wife, Dr. Janet Wasson, a general surgeon at Anne Arundel Medical Center, decided to make an investment that would support a healthier, more successful student population at FSU. They established the Col. Donald J. White and Dr. Janet L. Wasson Wellness Fund, which funds FSU’s Human Performance Laboratory, including research and activities that encourage wellness and healthy lifestyle choices. The fund also provides resources that complement and enhance existing wellness initiatives, such as Frostburg’s Creating Healthy, Informed Lasting Lifestyles (CHILL), a wellness program for Frostburg students.

“My wife and I put this idea together that integrates two departments that I think need to be attached at the hip – the Department of Health & Physical Education and the Department of Athletics,” White said. “It creates a subject pool for the Human Performance Laboratory that will help FSU gather data about the performance capabilities of the student-athletes and help them perform better. I think it’s a good synergy.”

Dr. Art Siemann, chair of FSU’s Department of Health and Physical Education, agrees.

“Because of the White and Wasson Fund, we have been working much closer with the Department of Athletics to provide accurate, clinical-quality assessments of a variety of human performance parameters,” he said.

They are using the results to improve training programs for FSU student-athletes, with an added benefit to students in the Athletic Training and Exercise and Sport Science programs, who are learning as they observe and conduct the assessments.

“The rest of the student body is also benefitting from the training these students receive. We are extending the assessment services and exercise program design to all students participating in the CHILL program,” he said. “Our goal of graduating healthier students is succeeding.”

Scholarship Reflects Company’s Personal Connection to Giving

In business, they say networking is everything. Thanks to some networking with Daly Computers and its president, Ryan Yu, Frostburg State University students in need of immediate financial assistance won’t fall through the cracks and be forced to drop out of college.

Ryan Yu and his wife, Margaret, Daly Computer’s legal counsel

“For the past several years, I’ve been pretty active in looking at how I can start giving back to the education community,” Yu said. “It’s very near and dear to me.”
Born in Taiwan, Yu received a full scholarship to attend a private boarding school in the United States in 1972.
“When you’re 15, 16, it’s an impressionable age,” he said. “It was tremendous. I never knew there was such a thing as a scholarship.”

According to Yu, this was the beginning of his American dream. A hard worker and good student, Yu continued to benefit from scholarship support during his undergraduate career at Boston University. He never took these opportunities for granted, even after he became the head of a successful IT infrastructure service provider like Daly Computers.
For the past four and half years, Daly Computers has supplied FSU with computers, laptops, TVs, projectors and other equipment. Yu mentioned his interest in giving back to Beth Kenney '90/M'00, director of Academic Computing, who put him in touch with B.J. Davisson '81, FSU's vice president for University Advancement and the executive director of the FSU Foundation.
“B.J. introduced me to the various programs FSU has for giving,” Yu said. “I just wanted to make some immediate impact.”

Yu and Daly Computers created the Daly Computers Pass-Through Fund, which is available to full-time FSU students with a grade point average of at least 3.0. It was set up to make unrestricted scholarship money available to students who need it most.
“The unrestricted funds allow our office to look at students on a case-by-case basis,” said Angela Hovatter '97/M'01, FSU's director of Financial Aid. “We are not restricted by specific criteria, which allows us to make the awards more individualized and help the students who have special circumstances in their lives.”

For example, Hovatter has used the Daly Computers Pass-Through Fund to help mid-year transfer students who entered FSU in January, but struggled to get additional funding because the Financial Aid Office had already awarded the majority of its funds for both fall and spring.
Yu has enjoyed the thank-you letters he’s gotten from the fund’s recipients.
“They all have the same message – ‘Hey, this is wonderful, someone out there cares, thank you,’” he said. “And for someone to know that someone out there cares and offers support, that’s the kind of emotion that’s not forgotten easily . . . and somewhere down the road these kids will remember and give back on their own.”

Thanks, Mom and Dad!

Parents spend their lives nurturing, guiding and molding their children, but it’s often not until those children become adults that they feel a need to show gratitude for a lifetime of care. Here are the stories of some alumni who decided that a scholarship for FSU students would be a good way to honor their own parents.

Commemorating a Family’s Love of Making Music

When Henry Smith ’75 was growing up, his life was accompanied by a constant soundtrack: going to summer band camp, music practice, playing rock n’ roll with his friends.

“That rattled the window glass in the house, but my mom never said a discouraging word!” he laughed. “In addition to the individual musical pursuits of my siblings and me, our family regularly had sing-a-longs around the piano with my mom, with everyone singing and playing something – even if it was the spoons!”

Smith’s mom, Margaret Ager Smith, was indeed at the heart of the family’s long-standing love for music. She began with the basics, making sure Smith and his two brothers and sister were all introduced early on with piano lessons, and later encouraging them to play different instruments and taking them to lessons all over town.

When Smith and his wife, Donna Rae, read about FSU’s Charlie and Wanda Steiner Memorial Scholarship, they were “inspired to honor my mom – and to thank her for her lifelong musical inspiration,” he said. So they established the Margaret Ager Smith Music Scholarship, which supports students majoring or minoring in music, with preference for applicants from Prince George’s County.

“We presented the news about the scholarship to my Mom as an 86th birthday present,” he said. “She was truly speechless.”

Brothers Honor Parents’ Self-Sacrifice

To honor the sacrifices their parents made to make their children’s college education possible, twin brothers the Rev. Dr. Donald Forrester ’67 and retired U.S. Air Force Col. Ronald Forrester ’67 endowed the G. Wesley and Margaret M. Forrester Education Scholarship. The scholarship will support full-time education students from Allegany, Garrett, Washington and Frederick counties.

Ron and Don Forrester, both'67

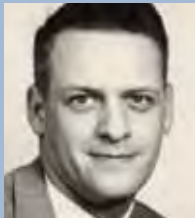

Though their mother, Margaret, who passed away in 2009, did not have the chance to pursue her own degree, she and her husband knew how important a higher education would be to their children’s success. According to Don, his parents “always placed a high value on education and encouraged us to take full advantage of our structured learning.”

“They wanted us to have an easier life than they had,” said Ron. “My parents were the inspiration to be all that I could be and provided me the opportunity to succeed if I worked hard and applied myself. ... They had a dream for us.”

Ron and Don capitalized on their parents’ dream when they both graduated from Frostburg State College with academic honors and went on to successful careers, Don as an educator and educational administrator and Ron in the Air Force.

“Like many parents from the Greatest Generation,” said Don, “they wanted to provide better lives for their children and grandchildren. This scholarship is a living testimony to them and that value system that always placed family first.”

A Gift of Education to Honor Educators

Looking for a way to honor their mother and memorialize their father in the region where they lived and taught, the children of Jack and Lois Elliott established a scholarship to support FSU elementary education majors from Allegany and Garrett counties, as well as contiguous counties in Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

“My parents believed in the importance of education; this will help others to carry on in that tradition,” daughter Liz Skidmore ’86 said. The Elliotts both worked as elementary educators in Allegany County. Lois taught third grade and Jack began as a teacher before becoming principal. Jack was still working as principal at Westernport Elementary when he passed away in 1979 at age 47.

The family has a long history with FSU, which dates back to the days of Frostburg Normal School No. 2, where Lois’ mother, Thelma Price Mackay, graduated in 1925. Jack and Lois both graduated from Frostburg State Teacher’s College in 1953, and Jack earned his master’s in 1963. Upon her retirement, Lois supervised student teachers at FSU. Skidmore’s sister Sue Elliott ’81, brother Jack Elliott ’87 and Skidmore’s children Travis ’98 and Donna Skidmore M’06 are all FSU graduates.

Presidential Merit Scholarships Support Call for Academic Excellence

This fall, Frostburg State University launched a bold fundraising effort as part of its ongoing push to improve academic standards, attract quality students and become a more distinctive and distinguished institution. Responding to President Gibralter's call to recruit more high academic achievers and support enrollment growth, FSU Foundation members have joined together to secure $2.5 million for merit-based scholar- ships over the next five years, funds deemed Presidential Merit Scholarships. To be eligible for these scholarships, students must demonstrate strong academic achievement in high school as evidenced by class rank, SAT scores in the upper quartile, or maintain a college cumulative GPA of 3.5 if they are transferring to FSU from another school. FSU aspires to award full tuition for four years, with financial need as a secondary consideration Four gifts of $10,000 or more have already been secured toward this effort.

These merit scholarships uphold FSU's legacy of providing learning opportunities for the most deserving students who will help the University raise the bar on its academic standards and reach new levels of excellence. These new scholarships will also allow FSU's best and brightest students to go on to successful careers and continue adding to FSU's strong foundation for the future.

ARTWORK, MEMORABILIA
 ADDED TO MEYERS COLLECTION

Barbara Meyers, left, and her brother, Douglas (not pictured), have donated a variety of artworks and knickknacks to Frostburg State University's Lewis J. Ort Library, where they will become part of the library's renowned George A. Meyers Collection, one of the largest collections of Marxist literature in the United States. Their father, the late George A. Meyers, a former labor secretary of Maryland's Communist Party, chairman of the National Labor Commission and a native of Lonaconing, Md., donated the items to FSU in tribute to his working-class roots and connection to Western Maryland. Meyers admires one of her favorite paintings, "Mountainous Autumn Landscape," with FSU Library Director Dr. David Gillespie, center, and B.J. Davisson '81, FSU's vice president for University Advancement and executive director of the FSU Foundation, Inc. The siblings acquired the painting for their father when they accompanied him to Mongolia when he was writing for The People's Daily World. For more information on the Meyers Collection, contact the Ort Library at 301.687.4395.

The spacious new atrium of the Lane University Center

Momentum Builds for Naming Opportunities in New, Renovated Campus Structures

The Lane Center addition includes a fitness center.

The past, present and future all come together in opportunities for donors to leave a legacy in two prominent campus buildings: the Lane University Center, the building that has been the hub of student life for the past 27 years, and the Sustainable Energy Research Center, a new facility that will help FSU lead the way in sustainability.

Naming opportunities in the Lane Center are possible with the recent renovation and expansion of the building. So far, the fitness center and the offices of SGA, The Bottom Line and the University Programming Council have been reserved. Opportunities are still available for the bookstore, the Greenhouse, Appalachian Station, the atrium, a University club, the game room, conference rooms of all sizes, the information desk, a computer lab and the offices of the Black Student Alliance and Greeks. Gifts from this campaign will support the Lane Center Endowment Fund.

The Sustainable Energy Research Center (SERF) is a green, self-sufficient, off-the-grid building and educational research center for renewable energy. One of the offices has been reserved but naming opportunities remain for its labs, additional offices and other spaces. Site work is under way on the building.

Those who wish to have their name, their business or the name of a loved one permanently associated with either the Lane University Center or the Sustainable Energy Research Center can do so through gifts starting at $10,000. Commitments can be fulfilled over the course of up to five years.

Contact the Office of University Advancement, 301.687.4161, or e-mail bjdavisson@frostburg.edu for more information.
